ROBERTSON ALSO A HERO

McGRAW'S MEN REVIVIFIED

John Calhoun Benton of North Carolina, with his left-handed curves performing tricky capers, hauled the Giants out of the cavern of adversity at the Polo Grounds yesterday, halting the triumphant march of the White Sox in the third game of the world's series, and planted McGraw's tottering club on the joyous end of a 2 to 0 victory. Warmed by a thundering reception from 33,777 loyal fans, the New York players shook off the lethargy which weighed them down in the first two games in Chicago, and in one swift, pungent batting rally hammered Rowland's mysterious pitching sensation, Eddie Cicotte, down to defeat.

Back on their native heath, the Giants found themselves and played sharp, snappy baseball. The sting of two defeats roused them from the snooze into which they had lapsed when the fighting Sox swept them away in the first two games. The old fight and drive of McGraw's men were evident yesterday in every move. They were on their toes, their heads were up, and they went at the White Sox as if they weren't a bit afraid of them.

Benton held Rowland's men to five scattered hits. In no one inning were they able to make more than one safe smash. Only two of the players with the red, white, and blue hosiery got as far as second base, and that was the deadline. As far as any of the Chicago players knew, third base was a howling wilderness. Cicotte no longer had the Giants scared. They swung at his famous knuckle ball with power and confidence. They knocked the shine from the cover. The flicker and the hop which were popularly supposed to envelop Cicotte's delivery with black magic were flattened against the right field fence by Davey Robertson.

It was Robertson who so efficiently backed up Benton's masterful pitching with his trusty club. David pried open the Giants' batting rally in the fourth inning when he smashed the ball to deep right field on a dizzy flight for three bases. When the ball left Davy's bat it traveled with all the deadly accuracy of the stone which whizzed from the sling of David of old when he won a decision over Goliath. Keyed up to fighting pitch by this boisterous bang by Robbie, Walter Holke came along with a two-base Texas Leaguer which pushed Robertson over the plate and brought back all of that slumbering aggressiveness which carries the Giants along to the front.

The sudden awakening of McGraw's men just at a time when their most optimistic admirers feared that the White Sox had them tumbling back to oblivion stirred the great crowd which jammed the Brush Stadium into a hilarious outburst of unrestrained enthusiasm. The captains of industry in the boxes, the Broadwayites, the visiting buyers from Iowa, and the plain ordinary New Yorkers who crowded the lower stand and bleachers all jumped to their feet, threw up their hats and yelled themselves hoarse at the Giants' triumph.

New York's waning confidence in this club of McGraw's has been restored, and they look for another victory today and a fight right up to the bitter end. The clubs will have to take another journey back to Chicago, where the fifth game will be played on Saturday, and if the title of the universe still hangs in the balance another game will be played at the Polo Grounds next Monday.

Benton's Control Unflinching.

Rube Benton has never pitched a better game in his long career. His control was marvelous, and it was hard to believe that the loose-jointed southpaw could ever be accused of being wild. He cut the corners with wide sweeping curves, and he served up a variety of tangents which had the Sox sluggers guessing at all times. Not once did he give a base on balls, and he fielded his position with perfect precision.

The only threats of trouble from the Chicago club came in the last two innings. Buck Weaver opened the eighth with a two-base hit in short left. Fletcher backed out into deep short to capture the ball, and Burns came racing in to meet it. Fletcher yelled for it and Burns halted. Fletcher's hands just touched the ball as it trickled to the soggy turf, and by that time Weaver was at second. Ray Schalk slapped a sizzling bounder at Benton, and Rube nabbed it with both hands and turned quickly about to find Weaver far off second on his way to third. Rube was as cool as an arctic breeze, and while the Giants' infielders were prancing about nervously, eager to get the ball and slap it on Bucko, Benton dared not trust

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Oct. 10, (via London.)—General Wille, Chief of the Swiss Army, replying today to a demand by agriculturists of the Canton of Zurich to postpone mobilization of troops of the canton, refused on military grounds.

"Owing to the entrance of America into the war," he said, "possibilities of the war taking a new and perhaps last phase next Spring are greatly increased. Therefore the danger for us of being drawn into the conflict will be greater than ever. In consequence we must arm and prepare. This is the reason why Swiss troops are serving longer than predicted."

PROCLAIMS FOOD LICENSE SYSTEM

COVER PRIME COMMODITIES

Restrictions Will Be Extended Later, if Necessary—Text of Proclamation.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—President Wilson issued a proclamation tonight setting forth the terms under which the Food Administration, after Nov. 1, would control the manufacture, storage, importation, and distribution of practically all of the essential foodstuffs. In it he gave warning that any person, firm, corporation, or association violating the regulations laid down would be subjected to the penalties provided for in the Food Control bill.

All of the great packing and wholesale concerns which have been accused of controlling the market in the food staples are included in the licensing system created by the proclamation. The President has power to extend the regulations.

Among those exempted from regulation are packers and distributors of beef, pork, and mutton whose gross sales do not exceed $100,000 a year, and the operators of poultry or egg packing plants whose sales do not exceed $50,000 a year. The Food Administratio, it is understood, does not believe that the operations of these classes would materially affect the general trade. Retailers doing a business of $100,000 or more a year are included in the licensing provisions.

The regulations do not affect farmers, gardeners, co-operative associations of gardeners, including livestock farmers, and other persons with respect to the products of any farm or other land owned or leased by them. These exemptions were made by Congress.

Food Administrator Hoover has started the organization of the machinery which will be used to enforce the rules, and will be prepared to take complete control on Nov. 1, by which time licenses must be obtained from the Food Administration.

President's Powers Sweeping.

Drastic powers are given to the President in the Food Control act. Under its provisions, if willful hoarding of essentials is discovered, he may confiscate the foods involved and have them disposed of by the courts. Such hoarding also is punishable by a fine of $5,000 or two years' imprisonment, or both. A comprehensive idea of the extent of the control exercised is given by this excerpt from Section 5 of the food law:

> Whenever the President shall find that any storage charge, commission, profit, or practice of any license is unjust, or unreasonable, or discriminating and unfair, or wasteful, and shall order such licensee, within a reasonable time fixed in the order, to discontinue the same, unless such order, which shall recite the facts found, is revoked or suspended, such licensee shall, within the time prescribed in the order, discontinue such unjust, unreasonable, discriminatory, and unfair storage charge, commission, profit, or practice.
> The President may in lieu of any such unjust, unreasonable, discriminatory, and unfair storage charge, commission, profit, or practice, find what is a just, reasonable, non-discriminatory, and fair storage charge, commission, profit, or practice, and in any proceeding brought in any court such order of the President shall be prima facie evidence.

The law further provides that any person or firm which does business without a license or after a license has been revoked shall on conviction thereof be punished by a fine of $5,000 or two years in prison, or both.

The method provided for the seizure of hoarded goods is condemnation in any District Court of the United States within the district where the goods are found. Conspiracy on the part of dealers to defeat the purposes of the food control law is made punishable by a fine of $10,000 or two years' imprisonment, or both.

Text of the Proclamation.

BY THE PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

A PROCLAMATION.

Whereas, Under and by virtue of an act of Congress entitled "An Act to provide for the national security and defense by encouraging the production, conserving the supply, and controlling the distribution of food products and fuel," approved by the President on the 10th day of August, 1917, it is provided among other things as follows:

> That, by reason of the existence of a state of war, it is essential to the national security and defense, for the successful prosecution of the war, and for the support and maintenance of the army and navy, to assure an adequate supply and equitable distribution, and to facilitate the movement of foods, feeds, fuel, including fuel oil and natural gas, and fertilizer and fertilizer ingredients, tools,

BERLIN BACKED SABOTAGE HERE, LANSING SHOWS

LINKS O'LEARY AND DR. HALE

PLANNED DRIVE IN CONGRESS

"Embargo Conference" Shown to Have Been a German Agency—William Bayard Hale Explains.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—In further disclosures of German treachery and diplomatic duplicity made by Secretary Lansing today it is shown conclusively that the German Government was engaged in acts of war against this country, and was officially encouraging and directing sabotage here fifteen months before the United States entered the world conflict.

The Secretary of State gave out three messages exchanged either by cable or wireless between the Berlin Foreign Office and General Staff on the one hand and Count von Bernstorff, the German Ambassador in Washington, on the other. Count von Bernstorff is directly implicated by these messages in German official plans to injure the United States.

The first of the three messages is dated Jan. 3, 1916. The American Government entered the war on April 6, 1917. This message is in the form of directions to Count von Bernstorff from Dr. Zimmermann, who retired recently from the office of Minister for Foreign Affairs, to arrange to destroy the Canadian Pacific Railway. Germany was at war with Great Britain and her colonies, and the only concern of the United States in this particular phase of the matter would be that the German Ambassador in Washington was being used to further plots involving a nation with which the American Government was on friendly terms. But in the two subsequent messages, one dated Jan. 26, 1916, and the other Sept. 15, 1916, violations of the law of nations directed against the United States were ordered.

Involves Four Americans.

In the second and third telegrams the following American citizens are mentioned in the German effort to injure their country: Joseph MacGarrity of Philadelphia, John P. Keating of Chicago, Jeremiah O'Leary of New York, and "Dr. Hale."

MacGarrity, Keating, and O'Leary were to inform von Bernstorff, according to the telegram, "as to persons suitable for carrying on sabotage in the United States and Canada." "Dr. Hale" was mentioned in the third telegram as being connected with the Embargo Conference, which, the message said, was "just about to enter upon a vigorous campaign to secure a majority in both houses of Congress favorable to Germany." "Dr. Hale" was commended by von Bernstorff to his superiors in Berlin as a person who could give them information about the "earlier fruitful co-operation" of the Embargo Conference.

Secretary Lansing declined to say whether "Dr. Hale" was Dr. William Bayard Hale, an American writer and former clergyman, who knows the Kaiser and is reputed to be his friend, and who was in Berlin at the time the message was sent. Dr. William Bayard Hale had edited a book containing extracts from President Wilson's writings and addresses, which had received widespread publicity in the Presidential campaign of 1912. During the acute period of the Mexican troubles Dr. William Bayard Hale had been one of President Wilson's unofficial emissaries to Mexico.

The telegrams open up a wide field of investigation in regard to German plottings in the United States more than a year before this Government entered the war. Keating, MacGarrity, and O'Leary, to quote one message, were "indicated," (to the German Government,) by Sir Roger Casement, who was executed in England for treason. MacGarrity and Keating were "reliable," while O'Leary was "reliable, but not always discreet," according to the information furnished to von Bernstorff by "Representative of General Staff" to be given to "Military Attaché," who at that time, was Captain Franz von Papen. Von Papen and his naval associate in the German Embassy in Washington, Captain Boy-Ed, were dismissed by the United States Government and compelled to return to Germany before the break in relations which resulted in the departure of von Bernstorff.

"Embassy must in no circumstances be compromised," was one expression in the message sent to Captain von Papen by 'Representative of General Staff' through von Bernstorff. The Embassy was not. Count von Bernstorff was suspected, but succeeded in covering up his tracks in his violation of neutrality and the hospitality of the country to which he was accredited. When he left the United States he was praised by many for the correct attitude he was supposed to have assumed and received much sympathy for the position in which he was placed. He was regarded, according to the showing made in some newspapers and by a considerable number of individuals, as a man who had been sincerely anxious to preserve friendly relations between the United States and Germany.

Bernstorff a Common Plotter.

Count von Bernstorff himself furthered this opinion by his seemingly frank utterances to persons with whom he discussed the war. The recent disclosures from the State Department in regard to his request to the Berlin Foreign Office to give him $50,000 to influence Congress, and the revelations made today of his implication in sabo-

Discovers Germans Plotted for South American War

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 10.—There is much concern among the people of Argentina over disclosures of German intrigues to bring about a conflict among Brazil, Argentina, and Uruguay.

The Argentine papers comment extensively on the disclosure that the German Legation at Buenos Aires paid for the publication of a booklet by the editors of a newspaper in this city predicting war between Brazil and Argentina.

Señor Carlos Rodriguez Larretta, the former Argentine Minister to France, declares in a published article today that a von Luxburg dispatch which has not yet been made public refers to German intrigues in Argentina and Southern Brazil. He says that the neutrality demonstration planned for next Friday is ill timed, as it must stamp Argentina as pro-German at a time when sister republics are breaking with the common foe.

TAKE LAST THREE IN SHIP BOMB PLOT

ALL ARE NOW IN CUSTODY

One Prisoner Says Bombs Had Been Put Aboard Lusitania Before Her Fatal Trip.

Detectives of the Police Headquarters Bomb Squad arrested three men last night who, Captain Tunney said, were the last of the most dangerous gang of plotters that operated for the German Government in this country. He said they were all who remained in this country of the men who made and distributed the bombs which sunk thirty ships carrying munitions to the Allies in 1915.

The men arrested were Eugene Reister, 32 years old, owner and manager of Germania Masonic Temple, 220 East Fifteenth Street, a native of Germany; Joseph Zepart, a printer, living at 3 and 5 Sylvan Place, and Walter Uhde, 1,912 Linden Street, Brooklyn, a German. They were all locked up on the charge of participating in a "conspiracy to destroy ships in the port of New York and en route to allied countries."

According to Reister and Uhde, they were told by Dr. Karl Schimmel, a lawyer at 51 Chambers Street, one of the gang, that when the Lusitania sailed she had on her nine T. N. T. bombs.

Captain Tunney said the arrests last night were the result of an investigation his squad began in April, 1916, when Captain von Rintelen and his associates were arrested for plotting. The arrest then, Captain Tunney said, resulted from the investigation of several months following receipt of information that in the office of Schimmel in March, 1915, there was a meeting of Schimmel, von Rintelen, Otto Wolpert, and Captain Sternberg, at which $10,000 was subscribed to pay men to place bombs on allied ships. This conference was followed by a second at 949 Willoughby Avenue, Brooklyn, which is the Labor Lyceum, attended by the same men and Reister, Zepart, and Uhde.

At the second meeting, the three men arrested last night received bombs and money with which to pay longshoremen and seamen for placing them on ships and in sugar barges. Captain Tunney said three lists of ships had been found, thirty in all, made out by Wolpert, and that almost every one of those ships was sunk by what was then considered a mysterious explosion.

Detectives who questioned them reported that Reister had said there was a conference of the plotters at the Labor Lyceum on the night before the Lusitania sailed. According to him Schimmel said: "I have the Lusitania well covered. When she sails she will carry nine 'cigars.'"

Captain Tunney said the bombs were made by Walter Scheele of Hoboken, who, after the arrest of von Rintelen and Hans Tauscher in 1916, fled to Mexico and later to Cuba.

When arrested last night Reister told the detectives that he had a souvenir in his locker at the Labor Lyceum. Captain Tunney sent two men over, and they found all the materials for making bombs, with the exception of T. N. T. The men also said they had an arsenal over in Tenafly, N. J. Detectives who went to the place designated found that T. N. T. which had been stored there had been removed and was then on its way into Pennsylvania. The men also said that on more than one occasion the T. N. T. bombs had been kept in the building at 51 Chambers Street, where the Justices of the Supreme Court have their chambers.

The records of the Fire Department show that in 1915, Schimmel, who lived in the Bronx, was refused a permit for the storage of high explosives in his house. Nevertheless, the men arrested last night said that Schimmel at one time had enough T. N. T. in his house "to blow up the Bronx."

Captain Tunney said that Zepart said he was not a German, but an American. When asked why he had helped to blow up allied ships, he said: "I did it to get a piece of change." According to Captain Tunney, the three men acted as intermediaries between the arch plotters, directed by Schimmel, and longshoremen and others, who actually place the bombs. Captain Von Rintelen, who is now in the Tombs, was a co-worker with Schimmel, who escaped from the detectives in 1916 and has not been heard of since.

Wolpert, also named by Captain Tunney, is now interned as an enemy alien and is also under $25,000 bail, on an indictment for plotting. Uhde was arrested at his home in Brooklyn. Reister and Zepart were arrested at the Germania Temple where Reister lives.

DENIES U-BOAT PROPHECY.

Tirpitz "Waited a Long While," Says the Berlin Tageblatt.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 10.—The Berlin Tageblatt prints a denial by Admiral von Tirpitz that he said: "The U-boats will finish Great Britain by Aug. 1."

The paper comments as follows:

GERMANY WILL NOT GIVE UP ALSACE TO OBTAIN PEACE

NO SOIL TO BE YIELDED

BRITISH BACKING BLAMED

Foreign Secretary Going on Peace Mission to Capitals of Germany's Allies.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 10.—At the plenary sitting of the Reichstag yesterday, Dr. Georg Michaelis, the Imperial German Chancellor, asserted that peace was impossible as long as Germany's enemies demanded any German soil or endeavored to drive a wedge between the German people and their Emperor. Foreign Secretary von Kühlmann said that as far as he was able to view the world situation there was no impediment to peace, no question which could not be solved by negotiations, except the French demand for Alsace-Lorraine.

The speeches were delivered in the discussion of the resolution against propaganda in the army in favor of a "German peace."

Sees Allies' Spirit Unchanged.

"A comparatively short time has elapsed," said Dr. von Kühlmann, "since the foreign policy of the empire was discussed in detail in the Budget Committee. I need, therefore, make only a kind of epilogue to the statements already made by the Imperial Chancellor and myself. The efforts of the Holy See to bring about an exchange of views between the belligerents have, so far as we are informed, not yet resulted in any considerable step forward since the reply by the Central Powers. We cannot say whether our adversaries will make up their minds even to answer the Papal note.

"After the clear, sincere and peace-loving notes addressed to the Pope by us and our allies, the utterances made by influential Entente newspapers hardly hold out the prospect that the answer to the Papal note, if made at all by our enemies, will bring the world one step nearer the goal suggested by the Pope.

"Although the Foreign Minister of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy, in a speech at Budapest, pointed out that the Central Powers were prepared in the sense indicated by the Papal note to collaborate not only in the termination of the present conflict, but in the reconstruction of a Europe nearly ruined, there are no signs of a 'new spirit' among our opponents, who are clinging to the time-worn formula of the annihilation of German militarism.

Answers "No" as to Alsace.

"The great question prolonging the struggle is not the future of Belgium, but that of Alsace-Lorraine. Great Britain, according to our information, has pledged herself to France that she will continue the fight for the conquest of Alsace-Lorraine both politically and with her armies so long as France desires to adhere to the program of regaining those provinces. This being the actual situation, I think it proper to give a clear and firm statement of our attitude, since, curiously enough, there still seems to be a misconception in this respect among our enemies, and even among our neutral friends.

"There is but one answer to the question, 'Can Germany in any form make concessions with regard to Alsace-Lorraine!' That answer is 'No.' So long as one German hand can hold a gun the integrity of the territory handed down to us as a glorious inheritance by our forefathers can never be the object of negotiations or concessions.

Calls French Policy Clumsy.

"When it seemed expedient to France to accept the formula 'without annexations' the French resorted to the transparent trick of bashfully covering up with the word 'disannexation' what is in reality a barefaced and forceful conquest. The trick is really too clumsy to be worthy of repute. Now, except for France's demand for Alsace-Lorraine, there is absolutely no impediment to peace, no question which could not be solved by negotiations or a settlement in such a way as to render superfluous the further sacrifice of blood.

"Our enemies heretofore have been careful not to reveal their real war aims. What they have told the world is a maximum program, which can only be realized after the complete military defeat of the Central Powers.

"The German Government has never answered this program because we believe in dealing with real sober facts. Our answer to our opponents' assertions that they cannot obtain a clear conception of our intentions is our reply to the Pope, and the parliamentary discussions in connection with this. They leave no doubt in the minds of any one who wishes to understand the essential principles of our peace program."

Dr. von Kühlmann is proceeding at an early date on a visit to Vienna, Budapest, Sofia, and Constantinople. It is said that his mission has important political and peace significance.

Can't Yield Soil, Says Michaelis.

"We would get along much better," said the Chancellor, "if those who combat the peace resolution of July 19 and assert that its supporters want a separate peace would be more just toward this resolution. We must work out in their positive sense, and forcefully, the aims comprised in this resolution. We must be clear in our minds as to what we desire and must emphasize what was said in the resolution.

CREWS ON 5 GERMAN WARSHIPS MUTINIED IN A WIDESPREAD PLOT FOR PEACE; SOCIALISTS ACCUSED IN THE REICHSTAG

Sixteen British Ships Sunk by U-Boats Last Week; Shipyards Launched More Tonnage in Same Time

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Fourteen British merchant vessels over 1,600 tons were sunk by mine or submarine in the last week, according to the official statement of the British Admiralty tonight.

Two vessels under 1,600 tons and three fishing vessels were sunk.

The arrivals during the week were 2,519, and the sailings 2,632. Five British vessels were unsuccessfully attacked, including three previously.

British shipyards last week launched more tonnage than the Germans sank. This indicates the speeding up which has taken place in the last few months.

The record of the previous week's sinkings was eleven vessels over 1,600 tons and two under that figure, the total of thirteen being the lowest since the U-boat war was proclaimed.

Drafting for Submarine Service May Have Caused German Fleet Mutiny

Dangerous Duty Shorn of Attraction That Made It Popular at Outset—Morale Further Affected by War Weariness—Fleet May Be Sent to Battle to Cure It.

By ARTHUR POLLEN,

The two significant facts about the mutiny of the German fleet are, first, that the mutiny is in the fleet and not in the army, and next, that it took place six weeks ago. It was something less than six weeks ago that there occurred the turn in the tide of the submarine war. One is immediately faced with the question, What is the connection, if any, between the mutiny and the decline in the submarine successes?

To answer this question we have to go back to the Spring of 1915. When the submarine war against trading ships was first proclaimed the under-water service in the German Navy was made extremely popular, first, by the promise of success and the prospect of honors and decorations to those who distinguished themselves; secondly, by a very high rate of pay offered to those who volunteered for the service; thirdly, by the promise of prize money for every ship sunk.

From February, 1915, until September of the same year, there was no lack of volunteers. But in August and September the measures taken by the British Admiralty began to be effective and the losses in German submarines were very formidable. Just how many boats were sunk has never been published. But it was a very high proportion, probably exceeding 50 per cent. of those at the disposal of the Marineamt in this period, and the fact of these losses could not be concealed from the German personnel. The result was that volunteering fell off and it became necessary to draft men from the high seas fleet at Kiel into the submarine service.

Start of the Ruthless Campaign.

From October, 1915, until the month of March, 1916, German submarine activities were very much restricted. The two crises that had arisen with America over the Lusitania and the Arabic were in themselves sufficient to make not von Tirpitz, but the German Government hesitate to go to extremes. But by March, 1916, a great many of the new program boats were ready and von Tirpitz was agitating to get to work on a ruthless campaign, and, in a famous phrase, to damn the consequences. So well did he, Reventlow, and the Pan Germans work their agitation that when this campaign was forbidden by the higher command and Tirpitz dismissed, there was a violent reaction of public opinion and von Capelle was ordered to carry out the very campaign for insistence on which von Tirpitz had been dismissed.

This campaign, as everybody remembers, ended after President Wilson's note over the Sussex case. A great number of boats were engaged, and here again there had been considerable losses, and the discontent in the German Navy with the commandeering system grew to still greater proportions. It is this discontent that largely explains the very exaggerated claims to victory made by the German Emperor and the Chancellor in the Reichstag after the German flight from the field of the Jutland battle. Vital as it was to keep up the spirits of the German people, crucial as was the importance of getting a new credit through the Reichstag without discussion, the third object, the maintenance of discipline and high morale in the German fleet was one that could not be neglected.

It was undoubtedly an object with the German Admiralty to re-establish the credit of the submarine, not only with the German public, but with the German Navy, and it is this that very largely explains why in June, July, and August the main submarine campaign was carried on in the Mediterranean, and not in northern waters, for in the Mediterranean the anti-submarine provision was necessarily far less efficient than nearer home. The success of the U-boats in southern waters made the opening of the Autumn campaign in northern waters easier, but secret reports from Germany have always conveyed the impression that sooner or later the personnel of the German Navy would recoil from the task set to the underwater fleet, not, of course, on account of its inhumanity to its victims, but because the toll of the Germans in lives would become insupportable. The surprising thing, therefore, about this Kiel mutiny, is not that it occurred in the first week of September, but that it was not until September that the thing happened.

The unpopularity of the submarine campaign is, of course, by no means the only cause of the mutiny. It is sufficient to say that there is no aggregation of men of the working classes of Germany today that is not bitterly opposed to the continuation of the war. But in the munitions factories and at the front the men are kept under stern discipline, and, what is far more important, are worked to the limit of their capacity day after day.

Sailors Idlest Class in Germany.

With the bluejackets and marines the case is different. The ships that lie in the Kiel Canal for safety are normally denuded of their crews, who are kept in barracks at Wilhelmshaven or Kiel. They are in all probability the idlest class in Germany. This would be bad enough with men sharing the discontent of their class. But it must be remembered that Kiel has from the beginning of the war been the most disaffected of all German towns. In the last eighteen months two serious outbreaks of rioting have taken place, followed by savage sentences on the ringleaders and selected participants. It is a bad atmosphere for men who can add a professional grievance to the loathing for the whole war which all the German proletariat now feel.

The most interesting problem to the student of naval warfare is, however, not the sociological crisis that the blockade and the general military failure must produce in Germany, but the precise value of our anti-submarine campaign in thwarting the progress of the U-boat. In common with other observers I have supposed that the turning point in the campaign, which occurred about the second week in September, was due, not to any falling off in the intensity of the German attack but to the improved methods with which that attack was being met by the British and the American Navy. But clearly if the decline arises from the inability of the German Admiralty to maintain their attack at its former efficiency owing to the mutinous conditions it has engendered in the German fleet, then the conclusions we have drawn as to the character and success of the convoy and other systems on which we have relied may have to be revised.

This is not, of course, to say that these reorganized methods are not effective. It is only to say that the alteration in the results is not due solely to them. From one point of view, this mutiny, if, as I suppose, is very largely due to the unpopularity of the submarine service, is extraordinarily gratifying, for it is a kind of deferred dividend on the immense work which the British Navy carried on for so long almost single-handed against the German pirates.

It would, I think, be a mistake to build on this mutiny any hope of an immediate German naval collapse. Indeed an entirely opposite result is far more probable. When it comes to the assertion of discipline and the maintenance of military morale the German higher command has very little to learn; and we are far more likely to see some bitter intensification of naval activity than any cessation of activity as a consequence of the difficulties which have arisen.

The question has often been asked, Will the German high seas fleet ever come out again to fight? And the answer has commonly been given that it will not do so till public opinion drives it out. It has been supposed, that is to say, that just as Cervera was forced to give battle to Sampson and Schley, and Villeneuve to Nelson, and Rodjestvenski to Togo, so Scheer and von Hipper might be compelled once more to try conclusions with the British fleet. A desire of the German people for naval action might compel action.

But we must not forget that public opinion cuts both ways, and if the German higher command sees a state of mind growing up in the German Navy which is dangerous it is quite capable of the desperate resolution of sending the fleet out to battle, if only to cure it of its megrims. Take it for all in all, the situation is replete with the acutest kind of interest.

BLAMED BY CHANCELLOR

MARINES REFUSE TO FIRE

KAISER WAS FOR SEVERITY

But Chancellor Softened Penalty—Disaffection Also Reported in the Army.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—A dispatch to the Central News from Copenhagen says that the mutiny in the German Navy, the first news of which became public here last night, took the form of a revolutionary outbreak on warships at Wilhelmshaven. This uprising is said to have had all the elements of a widespread and organized revolt and to have been suppressed only with the greatest difficulty. It took place about six weeks ago.

Several mutinous outbreaks are also reported to have occurred among soldiers at the front. These, the dispatch says, were not of such a grave character as those in the navy.

Revolt on Four Battleships.

An Amsterdam dispatch says that the crews of four battleships at Wilhelmshaven revolted. One of these battleships was the Westfalen, whose Captain was thrown overboard and drowned.

A Hague dispatch to The Daily Mail says that according to reports there the mutinous battleships also included the Prinz Regent, Luitpold, and the Kaiser. The crews landed. Marines refused to fire on them, whereupon soldiers surrounded the sailors, who surrendered.

A mutiny is also reported to have occurred on the German warship Nürnberg, which was at sea. The men seized the officers and proceeded in the direction of Norway, with the intention of being interned. The Nürnberg was overtaken by destroyers and forced to surrender.

Emperor William went to Wilhelmshaven and ordered that one out of every seven mutineers be shot. Chancellor Michaelis protested, with the result that only three were shot. Heavy sentences wer imposed on the others.

The Emperor's visit to Wilhelmshaven, in company with Chancellor Michaelis, was made after the mutiny had been suppressed. The Chancellor's objection to the Emperor's order that one mutineer in every seven be shot was on the ground that he could not assume such responsibility befort the Reichstag.

Says Guns Were Thrown Overboard.

An Associated Press dispatch from Berne says that a naturalized American citizen of German birth, who fled to Switzerland from a German seaport to escape military service, as the Germans refused to recognize the legality of his naturalization, asserts that the sailor organizations on many ships dismounted guns and threw them overboard, assaulted officers and refused to obey orders. The mutineers, he said, were quickly checked and a majority of them were shot.

Though the movement was entirely suppressed, it was asserted, the dissatisfaction in the navy had been in nowise subdued. The American said that he had visited many seaports and conversed with the sailors, and that he was aware of the mutinous spirit of the men before the rumors of disaffection began to spread. He added that the movement was not limited to the navy, but that it flourished in certain regiments, in which mutinies had occurred.

Unrest Spread from Russia.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 10.—In announcing to the Reichstag yesterday that a plot has been discovered in the German navy to paralyze the fleet Vice Admiral von Capelle, the Minister of Marine, is quoted in a Berlin dispatch as saying:

"It is unfortunately a sad fact that the Russian revolution turned the heads of some persons in our navy and introduced revolutionary ideas among them. Their insensate plan was to recruit representatives on all the ships, to cause the crews to refuse to obey orders, to paralyze the fleet, and to force peace upon the country.

"It is proved that the principal agitator conferred in this building with the Independent Socialist faction in the Reichstag, explaned his plans to Deputies Dittman, Haase, and Vogtherr, and obtained their approval.

"I cannot make a statement here on the subsequent events which occurred in the navy. The few persons who forgot their honor and their duty suffered the penalty which they deserved. I can only say that the rumors which are in circulation are immeasurably exaggerated. The combative force of the navy was not threatened for a single moment, and things will remain so."

In a speech in the Reichstag regarding the plot discovered in the navy, Wilhelm

Dittmann, Socialist member, said the punishments inflicted for the mutiny at Wilhelmshaven amounted collectively to 300 years penal servitude, and that several of the men had been condemned to death.

Suggest Treason by Socialists.

A Centrist member, Herr Trimborn, said that if the three Deputies named by Admiral von Capelle had transgressed the law it would be a question of high treason.

Herr Kretch, Conservative, said if the three men were guilty their Parliamentary immunity must be rescinded, and that they must be prosecuted.

Herr Ebert, a Socialist leader, said the Government ought to have considered the effect of such grave charges on domestic and foreign politics. The material that Admiral von Capelle had produced, he added, did not justify his charge against the Independent Socialists, and the Chancellor had set one party outside the pale at a moment when a difficult situation necessitated the utmost unity.

"We regard it as our duty to fight with all our strength a Government which indulges in such a policy," Herr Ebert concluded.

Gustav Stresemann, National Liberal, urged the necessity of the fullest investigation of the charges against Deputies Hasse, Vogtherr, and Dittman, which, he said, had aroused great suspicion as to the action of the Independent Socialists.

Members Reply to Charges.

Herr Haase, leader of the Socialist minority in the Reichstag, replying to Admiral von Capelle, said:

"It is true that the sailor of whom Admiral von Capelle spoke had a talk with me in the party conference room, but it is incorrect to say that he proposed such a plan to me. The sailor in question voiced his strong discontent and anger. The sailors had become eager subscribers to independent periodicals and evinced a desire for intellectual culture while on land. I pointed out to him that this was permissible, but warned him to be careful and proceed cautiously."

Deputy Vogtherr said that he had also spoken with the sailor referred to, and had repeatedly discussed with him the conditions on his ship and in the navy. Sailors and deputies were entitled to do this, according to Deputy Vogtherr, who declared it was incorrect to say that the mutiny had originated with them.

Deputy Dittman said that sailors and marines had also visited him, but there was no talk of such a plan mentioned by Admiral von Capelle.

The scenes in the Reichstag were of a most disorderly character, the shouts from the other deputies being heard loud above the furious interruptions of the Socialists.

Michaelis Denies Ban on Socialists.

Herr Neumann, having contended that the fact that the Public Prosecutor had taken no steps to suspend the accused Deputies proved Admiral von Capelle's statement unjustified, Chancellor Michaelis rose and said:

"I know the regrettable fact that crimes have been committed by some of our sailors and that they are in possession of cards showing that they have bound themselves to recognize the principles of the Independent Socialists, and that with these cards agitation is being conducted on a large scale aboard German warships."

Repudiating the statement that the Chancellor had said the Independent Socialists stood outside the pale, Dr. Michaelis challenged the House to say whether any one had heard him assert that the Socialist Party should be outlawed.

At this juncture there was a great uproar among the Socialists. The Chancellor argued that there was a great difference between saying the army and navy must be protected from agitation tending toward insubordination and declaring that the Socialist Party must be placed under a special law.

"The punishment must be heavy," said the Chancellor, "because it is a question of military discipline. The resistance must be broken down. That is all that has happened, and we regret it from the bottom of our hearts. The guilty parties were ill-advised and acted in a way incompatible with fidelity and obedience."

Herr Haase again protested against the failure to call Independent Socialists as witnesses, but Chancellor Michaelis interrupted, saying that this had nothing to do with the Ministry but with the court-martial.

Mutineers Told of Conference.

Admiral von Capelle, again rising, denied that he had accused the Independent Socialists of hatching plans and influencing sailors, and he added that he possessed documentary evidence of everything he had said.

Then, amid a great tumult of applause and protests from the right and left of the house respectively, von Capelle said that the guilty parties had confessed to having gone to a sort of party conference, which included Deputies Vogtherr, Dittman, and Haase, at which the plan was discussed, and they had been told that they were committing a punishable act and that therefore it would be advisable to exercise the utmost caution. These Deputies had also declared that they would support the plan by every possible way by means of pamphlets and printed matter.

Alleges Proof Against Socialists.

Chancellor Michaelis said the punishment inflicted on the men at Wilhelmshaven was not unjust, papers found on them indicating they had bound themselves to recognize the principles of the Independent Socialists and proving that that party had carried on an extensive agitation in the fleet.

The Chancellor is reported to have added that the Independent Socialists belonged to a party in which he could place no confidence, as they were endangering the State. The punishments meted out to the men, he said, had to be severe, as everything was at stake in a critical moment.

SEE WEAKENING IN MORALE.

Germany's Fighting Force Fast Declining, Observers Say.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Few dispatches since the war began have created more interest at the Navy Department than today's report from Amsterdam telling of a revolt in the German Navy.

Officers unhesitatingly declared that the story was one of the most encouraging signs of the year for the Allies and probably one of the most ominous from the German view. They pointed out that, while the allied powers have noted repeatedly recently in their official statements that the morale of the German troops was declining, the observers have believed that the end would come in food and labor riots or perhaps in a political revolt. There has been nothing to suggest that the iron discipline of the German military system had lost its hold over the fighting millions in the slightest degree.

The declining morale on the western front noted, it was said, has shown itself in the feeble character of counter-attacks as compared to the all but irresistible drive a year ago. Assault after assault has dashed itself to pieces before the French and British trenches.

The revolt in the navy, these officers said, was a more serious matter for Germany. The sailors generally have not been subjected to the battering of the guns day after day, month after month. They insisted that if there was discontent among the sailors with their condition it must be even greater in the army.

As one possible explanation of the navy revolt, they pointed out that ever since submarine warfare was started by the Germans, the British have adopted the consistent policy of suppressing information as to the fate of the submarines sent to the bottom by their patrols. The policy was adopted as a deliberate method of breaking down the morale of the submarine crews.

Crews for the U-boats are understood to be drafted from the High Seas Fleet as needed. The big ships are practically idle. They have done little since the North Sea fight but steam out to target practice behind mine-protected zones. For the men of the ships there has been little but the deadly routine of this business, varied only by calls for duty and probable death on the submarines.

BERLINERS SHIVER TO CONSERVE COAL

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Oct. 9, (via London, Oct. 10.)—The coal distribution authorities some days ago, when the weather was sunny and warm, decreed that before Oct. 15 no fires should be lighted anywhere in private or public, even in Government buildings. On Saturday the weather began to grow extremely chilly, and has continued so ever since. Men have been compelled to bring out their Winter overcoats, and women are decorating themselves with furs. Rain adds to the general discomfort.

The suburb of Schoeneberg asked the coal authorities to withdraw the order, but so far this has not been done. The weather prophets are certain that the sun will soon shine again as brightly as the season permits.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—The German State railways are faced with a great shortage of fuel, and drastic limitation of traffic has begun, according to reports reaching here.

The railroads propose to levy heavy excess fares on express trains, so as to discourage all except unavoidable business journeys. A large number of fast trains have been eliminated from the Winter timetables. The Württemberg railways will charge heavy excess fares for traffic on Saturday afternoons and Sundays.

AIRMAN AT PRINCETON HAD POISON IN ROOM

Private Livingood Under Arrest and Authorities Hint of Plot Against Aviators.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—An investigation, resulting from chance remarks dropped by one of the students in the aviation camp at Princeton, N. J., led to the discovery of two pounds of cyanide of patassium in the room in Patton Hall, Princeton, occupied by Samuel O. Livingwood, a private in the Aviation Corps.

Immediately upon the discovery of the poison, of which the quantity was sufficient to kill far more persons than dine at the hall, Livingood and another private were arrested by the provost guard. Upon receipt of orders from the military authorities, Commandant Rodman Gilder, in charge of the aviation school, took the prisoners under guard to Governor's Island.

Livingood was detained and held for court-martial early next week. The other man was brought back to Princeton and reinstated. The military authorities suspect the existence of a plot to poison students at aviation camps in every part of the country. The origin of the plot and the names of those who conceived it are unknown, so far as can be learned.

Livingood is 24 years old. His home is given as Zanesville, Ohio, and his occupation in his enlistment papers is described as that of steward.

In the aviation student body at Princeton there are enrolled about 600 men. Practically the entire number eat in the dining hall at the same time. In addition, about 600 college students eat in the same hall.

REPORT LUXBURG ARRESTED

Ex-Minister Said to be Bound for a Detention Camp.

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 10.—Count Von Luxburg, the German Minister who recently received his passports from the Argentine Government, has been arrested in the southern port of Buenos Aires Province, according to the highest authority.

The Count is now being taken to the island of Martin Garcia, where he will be kept in the German detention camp under military guard until an opportunity is found to send him out of the country.

GERMANY WILL NOT GIVE UP ALSACE

"The German nation will stand together as one man unshakable, and persevere in the fight until its fight and the rights of our Allies to existence and development are assured. In its unity the German Empire is invincible.

"We must continue to persevere until the German Empire, on the continent and overseas, establishes its position. Further, we must strive to see that the armed alliance of our enemies does not grow into an economic offensive alliance.

"We can in this sense achieve a peace which guarantees the peasant the reward of his land; which gives the worker merited recompense; which creates a market for industries and supplies the foundation for social progress; which gives our ships the possibility on a free voyage of entering ports and taking on coal all over the world. A peace of the widest economic and cultural development, a real peace. This peace we can attain within these limits.

"As long as our enemies confront us with demands which appear unacceptable to every single German, as long as our opponents wish to interfere with our frontier posts, as long as they demand that we shall yield a piece of German soil, as long as they pursue the idea of driving a wedge between the German people and its Emperor, so long shall we with folded arms refuse the hand of peace.

"We can wait. Time is working for us. Until our enemies perceive that they must reduce their claims, so long must the cannon speak and the U-boats do their work. Our peace will yet come."

GERMAN SOLDIERS WANT PEACE

Herr Dove, Back from the Front, Thus Reports to Reichstag.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 10.—An uncensored report of Monday's debate in the Reichstag has been received here. It shows that Heinrich Dove, Radical Socialist, who has returned from the front, reported to the members of the Reichstag that the soldiers everywhere had expressed the desire that the war speedily be ended.

Socialist speakers produced a whole series of instructions from the higher military authorities concerning the "enlightenment campaign," which were in direct variance to the principle of no politics in the army, which, Lieut. Gen. von Stein, Prussian War Minister, said, governed the campaign. It was asserted by the Socialists that the War Minister was unable to controvert this testimony.

The Socialists also called attention to the fact that the general order for "enlightenment against peace" was issued immediately after the adoption of the Reichstag peace resolution July 19, showing that the campaign was directed against the Reichstag majority. They brought out the fact that a conference was called by the War Ministry in the middle of August to discuss preventive measures against strikes, and that the strike movement of the Radical Socialists against the war and food and labor conditions was still a menace. Members of the conference, it was stated, advocated the suspension of the right of assembly under certain circumstances and the putting of the leaders of the workmen into the army in order to cope with strikes.

Philipp Scheidemann, leader of the majority Socialists, did not participate in the debate. It is reported that he was in Copenhagen on business, which it is considered must have been important to keep him out of the Reichstag in such an emergency.

BERLIN BACKED SABOTAGE HERE

tage plots in this country, place him in the position of having been an ordinary intriguer, willing to violate all the proprieties of the diplomatic office he held and criminally destroy property interests, probably involving the loss of human life.

One phrase in the telegram addressed to Count von Bernstorff "for Military Attaché" and signed "Representative of General Staff" has excited the interest of officials. "Railway embankments and bridges must not be touched," Count von Bernstorff was informed in the instructions to arrange with MacGarrity, Keating, and O'Leary to carry out sabotage "on every kind of factory for supplying munitions of war." Taken in connection with the context of the message, officials construe this to mean that the activities of the men working with Bernstorff and Papen were to be confined to wrecking railway trains and injuring their tracks.

O'Leary now edits Bull, a publication to which the use of the mails was recently denied by the Post Office Department for seditious utterances.

According to what was said today in the office of Senator Paul O. Husting of Wisconsin, who, in a speech in the Senate, exposed the pro-German activities of the Embargo Conference, John P. Keating of Chicago, one of the three men commended to the German Government by Sir Roger Casement, was identified with the Embargo Conference. Senator Husting accused the conference of being responsible for paying for the deluge of telegrams sent to Senators and Representatives calling for an embargo on munitions. It was apparent that these telegrams emanated from a common source.

Mention is made in one of the telegrams to von Bernstorff of Captain Boehm of the German Army, who was then in the United States. Boehm was to give von Bernstorff information as to plans for the destruction of the Canadian Pacific Railway. He was arrested on the Dutch steamship Zealandia at Falmouth, England, while on his way from Spain to Holland traveling under cover of an American passport, and is now a prisoner in England. Boehm was indiscreet. He told too much to members of the American Truth Society, according to a report in the possession of this Government, and this fact has special significance now in the light of the statement in one of the telegrams from Berlin that O'Leary, the President of that organization, was "reliable but not always discreet."

It is said that Boehm made a trip into Canada disguised as a laborer, but could not resist the temptation to travel in a parlor car drawing room. The diversity between his attire and his luxurious method of traveling attracted attention, and he narrowly escaped arrest. Boehm's explanation was that he was a Prussian officer, and that Prussian officers always traveled first class.

Source of Documents Secret.

The State Department continues to preserve silence as to where it obtained German official secret correspondence, such as the telegrams sent to the Berlin Foreign Office by Count von Luxburg, the German Chargé d'Affaires in Buenos Aires, through the Swedish Legation in that capital; the request of Count von Bernstorff for funds to "influence" the United States Congress, the implication of Count von Bernstorff in the Bolo Pacha intrigue to subsidize French and American newspapers in behalf of Germany, and the three messages made public today.

All Secretary Lansing was willing to say on the subject today was that the last three messages had not been sent from Berlin under cover of the United States diplomatic code. This remark was inferred to mean that communication between von Bernstorff and his Government was maintained through the medium of some neutral diplomatic establishment whose code dispatches were permitted by the British authorities to go to their destinations in the supposition that they related to the business of the Government to which or by which they were sent.

The Three Messages.

Secretary Lansing's statement was made known in this form:

"The Secretary of State publishes the following two telegrams from the German Foreign Office to Count von Bernstorff in January, 1916:

Jan. 3. (Secret.) General Staff desires energetic action in regard to proposed destruction of Canadian Pacific Railway at several points with a view to complete and protracted interruption of traffic. Captain Boehm, who is known on your side and is shortly returning, has been given instructions. Inform the military attaché and provide the necessary funds.

(Signed,) ZIMMERMAN.

Jan. 26. For Military Attaché. You can obtain particulars as to persons suitable for carrying on sabotage in the United States and Canada from the following persons: 1. Joseph MacGarrity, Philadelphia, Penn.; 2. John P. Keating, Michigan Avenue, Chicago; 3, Jeremiah O'Leary, 16 Park Row, New York.

One and two are absolutely reliable and discreet. No. 3 is reliable but not always discreet. These persons were indicated by Sir Roger Casement. In the United States sabotage can be carried out on every kind of factory for supplying munitions of war. Railway embankments and bridges must not be touched. Embassy must in no circumstances be compromised. Similar precautions must be taken in regard to Irish pro-German propaganda.

REPRESENTATIVE OF GENERAL STAFF.

The following telegram from Count von Bernstorff to the Foreign Office in Berlin was sent in September, 1916:

Sept. 15. With reference to report A. N. two hundred and sixty-six of May tenth, nineteen sixteen. The embargo conferee in regard to whose earlier fruitful co-operation Dr. Hale can give information, is just about to enter upon a vigorous campaign to secure a majority in both houses of Congress favorable to Germany, and requests further support. There is no possibility of our being compromised. Request telegraphic reply.

DID NOT AUTHORIZE USE OF NAME, HALE ASSERTS

Denies Activity in Embargo Conference—O'Leary Declares He Is Persecuted.

Dr. William Bayard Hale, once President Wilson's personal Commissioner to Mexico, denied last night that he had supplied to the German Government information as to the campaign of the American Embargo Conference, as was intimated in the cablegram of Ambassador von Bernstorff to his foreign office. Dr. Hale said that the use of his name by the organization as Chairman of the National Board was without authorzation, and that he had it stopped as soon as he discovered that his name was being used.

The letterhead on which the name of Dr. Hale appears contains also the names of Dr. Charles F. Aked, an Englishman by birth, who has said that his name was used wthout authorization. It also contained the name of Frank S. Monnett, former Attorney General of Ohio, who was indicted for his activities in connection with the Pro-German Labor National Peace Council. The fourth name was that of Colonel Jasper Tucker Darling of Chicago, a civil war veteran, who has declared that he was a victim of pro-German conspirators.

As to who were the real backers of the Embargo Conference, Dr. Hale said he could shed no light, but from correspondence he showed to a reporter it was to be gleaned, as had been stated before, that the moving spirit of the organization was Will R. MacDonald, a former newspaper man, who acted as Secretary and signed all the letters which were written to Dr. Hale.

It was charged by the Democratic National Committee, in the campaign last year, that the Embargo Conference was financed by German money. At that time Mr. MacDonald issued a general denial.

Disowns O'Leary.

Dr. Hale emphasized that if Count von Bernstorff had a financial or personal interest in the Embargo Conference he knew nothing of it. Incidentally, Dr. Hale took occasion to disown Jeremiah O'Leary and also to say that, while he worked for William Randolph Hearst, he had never met him.

When the von Berntsorff messages were read to Dr. Hale he dictated this statement:

"Yes, I know something of the American Embargo Conference. Early in the year 1915, more than two years before the United States entered the war, I was surprised by a visit of a gentleman from Chicago, (I do not remember his name,) who had seen an article or two of mine deprecating war. He asked me to make a speech in Chicago before an assembly of ladies and gentlemen who hoped to preserve peace, and who, as I remember, he thought would form an organization to promote public opinion against the further shipment of arms and ammunition from America.

"I expressed some sympathy with the idea, but declined to go to Chicago to speak. A few months later I was astonished to find my name printed on the stationery of 'the American Embargo Conference' as 'Chairman of the National Board.'

"Consulting my letter files, I find that on Dec. 7, 1915, I wrote to the Executive Secretary of this organization, expressing surprise that they had used my name and asking them to withdraw it from their stationery. Some correspondence followed, as I gleaned from a hurried review of my letter files, but the executive officers of the conference apologized for the unwarranted use of my name and withdrew it from their stationery. On my part I expressed sympathy with their movement so far as I was acquainted with it, but declined to associate myself with the organization.

"I never saw Count Bernstorff and had never communicated with him, either directly or indirectly, until May 31, when, upon leaving for Europe, I called at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel and spent probably two minutes and a half in receiving from him a perfunctory standardized letter such as is given to all newspaper correspondents. If he used my name as a reference for the embargo conference it must have been purely upon the unauthorized letterhead. Furthermore, nobody in Berlin ever mentioned this obscure organization to me."

Last night Dr. Hale asked that the following be added to his former statement:

"I have never in my life met Mr. William Randolph Hearst personally nor communicated with him, I am a humble member of the staff of The New York American.

"This Mr. O'Leary is a gentleman whom I never had had the pleasure of meeting in my life; my most vivid recollection of him is that, a year or two ago, he denounced me on a public platform as an English spy because I had spoken a word in favor of the Declaration of London, a document of which apparently he was ignorant."

Hale Article as Propaganda.

Dr. Hale consented to allow a reporter to go through the files of his correspondence relating to the American Embargo Conference. This showed that the pro-German propagandists had made use of articles written by Dr. Hale to the extent of distributing 50,000 copies of a pamphlet entitled "Thou Shalt Not Kill," an argument against the United States getting into the war, written over two years ago.

In a letter written from the Chicago headquarters of the Embargo Conference on Nov. 1, 1915, MacDonald wrote to Dr. Hale as one of the "sincere friends" of the movement. In this letter MacDonald said, in part:

"As you know, the active work of the conference was started at the beginning of August, and we wish to inform you that in the three months following the headquarters here in Chicago has sent out 400,000 of the pledge postal cards that call for the signatures of voters who are willing to support our demand for an embargo.

"More than one hundred thousand of these cards have been returned to our headquarters with the signatures of voters. This means that we have received here, and have on file, fully five hundred thousand pledges. We would call attention to the fact that these signatures are far more than the signatures to petitions, for we have never failed to impress upon the men circulating the cards the fact that it was absolutely necessary for them to point out to the voters that their signatures were not wanted unless their sincere pledge went with the signed name."

Feared Secret Service Men.

MacDonald also told in the letter how the German press was furthering the embargo propaganda. In a letter under date of Nov. 10 MacDonald said in part:

"From the beginning we have worked to keep our organization in such shape that there could be no chance to charge that we were pushing a pro-German propaganda. We have insisted that every meeting held by us must follow a distinctly patriotic program. We have had the veterans of the G. A. R. on the platform at every meeting, and our main speaker at our big meetings has been Colonel Darling, who is identified at the head of this letterhead. We admit that we have appealed to the German-Americans for support, but we have made the same appeal to Americans of all nationalities and we count Americans of most nationalities in our ranks.

"We are almost confident that all of this agitation and this run of sensational news regarding the plots and plotters is inspired stuff written to cripple us and the other organizations, and this thought has given birth to the fear that the stories and possible attempts at investigations may have led you to feel that you did not care to be connected with this movement. We will be very sorry to learn that this is the case, for from the first we have looked upon you as one of the strongest men helping us in the attempt to bring about an embargo."

Dr. Hale then called attention to a letter he wrote to MacDonald refusing to be an officer of the organization. His letter said in part:

"Permit me to say that I have never for an instant had the slightest idea that you had employed my name otherwise than as a compliment to me, and in the full belief that its employment was agreeable to me. As a matter of fact. I never received the letter, a copy of which you inclosed, dated Aug. 3, 1915, proposing naming me as Chairman of the National Board of the Conference and asking me to reply within a week. * * *

"Please, therefore, understand that I absolve you entirely and absolutely from any fault or error. But I am confronted with the question whether I should allow the use of my name in an enterprise of which I have only the most general idea. I am put on your letterheads as 'Chairman of the National Board.' So far as I am aware, no 'National Board' exists; at least, I have never heard the names of any members of it. I have not the slightest doubt in the world that all you are doing is praiseworthy and indeed splendid; with what I understand to be your purpose, I am in the most hearty sympathy. But you know how numerous and how vicious are the enemies of those of us who are endeavoring to free the country from implication in the dreadful crime or responsibility for bloodshed in Europe; and you know, as well as I know, that if the attacks of these enemies of our country should turn upon you, those whose names are on your stationery would be summoned before some inquisitorial body where I, for instance, would have to admit that I knew nothing of the 'National Board' of which I was 'Chairman' and that, as a matter of fact, I knew nothing whatever of the actual operations of the American Embargo Conference."

"With the best wishes in the world for your enterprise, I am obliged to conclude that I ought to be responsible only for what I am doing myself. I am the more concerned on this point in that a new year is about to begin, a year which I fancy may be a very important one, and in which I am most anxious to maintain absolute independence of every organization and every influence that could by any possibility be supposed to affect any act or word of mine. I must, therefore, I think, ask you if you will not be so good as to relieve me of the appointment which you were so kind and complimentary as to make."

The American Embargo Conference was merged into the American Independence Conference in October, 1916, at a meeting in Chicago. Several New York men, among them Mr. O'Leary, John D. Moore, National Secretary of the Friends of Irish Freedom; Justice Daniel F. Cohalan, Robert E. Ford, editor of The Irish World; Victor F. Ridder, R. Pagenstecher, MacDonald, and others attended.

MacDonald remained active in the work of the Independence Conference. The real reason for the alteration of the work of the pro-Germans was explained yesterday by a New York man who attended. He said that the backers of the anti-embargo fight decided that the greatest good to the cause could be effected by the defeat of President Wilson. Therefore, they organized the larger conference to conduct a national campaign for Hughes.

Joseph Frey of 71 Washington Square, who attended the Chicago meeting, said last night that the head of the Embargo Conference was Carl Schmidt of Detroit. Mr. Frey said that he was among those who contributed to the support of the Embargo Conference "as did other gentlemen interested in the cause."

John D. Moore said that he was a member of the Independence Conference, but not of the Embargo Conference. Mr. Moore's purpose was to aid in the work of working for the defeat of President Wilson.

Mr. Ridder was asked last night what he knew about the workings of the Embargo Conference. He said he could not say whether he was a member until he had consulted papers which were in his office.

O'Leary Vehement in Denial.

Mr. O'Leary, who is President of the "American Truth Society," issued a statement yesterday denying that he had had anything to do with the pro-German sabotage in the United States. He said of the documents made public in Washington yesterday:

"The Zimmermann message if genuine is a complete surprise to me. The only thing I can say about it is a matter about which I could possibly know nothing. What Zimmerman might say to his military representative I could not in any way control, but I am the controller of my own conduct, and as such I can positively say that I have had nothing to do with sabotage, nor have I ever been approached by any German agent on that subject.

"It is an outrage for the State Department to publish documents reflecting on an American citizen without any proof that they have been connected with the subject matter. I have been active in fighting the British propaganda with my voice, pen, and energies because I have been convinced that reason is a far more effective weapon than dynamite.

"My work has been in the open. I have been connected with no secret intrigues. Every newspaper in the country is familiar with my work, and Mr. Lansing knows this as well as they do."

O'Leary Accuses Wilson.

Mr. O'Leary last night made public this telegram, which he sent to Secretary Lansing:

Robert Lansing, Secretary of State,
Washington, D. C.

Sir: Malicious and mendacious are the hideous suggestions you are striving to create in the public mind in publishing the alleged Zimmermann note. Whether it was forged by British agents or whether it is genuine, you must know the document has no standing in any court. Since it is no proof it establishes nothing. Although I have been continually hounded by Government sleuths; although my telephone has been tapped; my mail opened; my home and office ransacked for papers; although every constitutional right of privacy has been destroyed by a Government that is fighting for democracy and the freedom of small nations; although the Department of Justice can now trade my liberty for that of German enemies who should be interned by offering them freedom for false evidence against me, I challenge you, Sir, to produce one scrap of evidence to prove I have ever been connected with the subject matter of the Zimmermann note.

The fight I have made has been legitimate, it has been in the open, and my weapons have been reason instead of dynamite. My crimes have been that I have persistently fought the British propaganda you have encouraged and protected. I have tried to preserve the neutrality of my country as a means of keeping it out of war, and in a war to protect the rights of small nations and for democracy I have striven, as every self-respecting man of Irish blood should strive, to secure recognition of Ireland's claim to absolute independence.

For these crimes I have been misrepresented by the press and persecuted by Woodrow Wilson and his Administration. It is my opinion that you could win this war far more effectively by demanding the freedom of Ireland rather than by persecuting and defaming the men who are willing to make every sacrifice to compel this Government to be honest about its war aims.

JEREMIAH A. O'LEARY.

During the Presidential campaign O'Leary sent to President Wilson at Shadow Lawn a letter in which he said that the Wilson policies were pro-British and anti-American. In reply, the President sent Mr. O'Leary this message:

"Your letter received. I would feel deeply mortified to have you or anybody like you vote for me. Since you have access to many disloyal Americans and I have not, I will ask you to convey this message to them."

Captain Hans Boehm, referred to in the telegrams made public at Washington, was reported in cable dispatches from London last January as having been taken off the Dutch steamer Zeelandia at Falmouth, bound from Spain for Holland. Boehm, who was traveling under an American passport, issued in the name of Jelka Le Roy Thrasher of Georgia, at first maintained that he was Thrasher, but later, when confronted with a British Admiralty intelligence officer, who addressed him as "Captain Boehm," he admitted his identity.

Boehm told the British authorities that he went to the United States, where he was employed by the German Secret Service. He was placed in an internment camp, where, it is supposed, he is now.

HALE ACCUSED IN 1916.

Providence Journal Said Then He Was in Bernstorff's Pay.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Oct. 10.—On Feb. 3, 1916, The Providence Journal printed a statement which said in part:

"An organization known as the American Embargo Conference, planned and brought into existence by Count von Bernstorff at Washington, and financed directly from the office of Dr. Heinrich Albert, the fiscal agent of the Berlin Government at New York City, has taken up the work of the so-called Labor's National Peace Council, and through certain individuals is now using every effort to bring to its aid United States Senators and other members of Congress in order to bring about a cessation of the export of war materials to Europe. This organization, which already has branches in St. Louis, Chicago, Cleveland and Pittsburgh, is headed by William Bayard Hale, who calls himself Chairman of the National Board, and who is directly in the monthly pay of Ambassador Bernstorff and Dr. Albert.

"Every movement in the progress of this Embargo Conference work has been placed before Count von Bernstorff. The German Ambassador, furthermore, is in constant communication with members of his Washington lobby, who are seeking to swing certain members of the Senate and the House into line."

The Journal on the same day printed an article including Dr. Hale's circular which called on the American people to stop the traffic in munitions at once.

NAVAL STORES OUTPUT OFF.

German Intrigue to Cause a Labor Shortage Is Suspected.

CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—Shortage of labor due to the exodus of thousands of negroes from Southern States to the North, together with unfavorable weather conditions in the early Spring, has resulted in a 15 per cent. decrease in this year's crop of naval stores—turpentine, pitch, tar, and resin—according to the statements made in a committee report adopted today at the annual meeting of the National Paint, Oil, and Varnish Association.

The United States is now the sole source of supply in these stores for the allied navies and merchant marine.

The association adopted a resolution urging a standardization of naval stores and the eliminaton of adulteration by Federal legislation. W. H. Crawford of Cincinati, Chairman of the Commttee on Naval Stores, said:

"We believe that the German propaganda that induced the negroes to leave the South was directed against the indispensable naval stores as well as against cotton."

After Canned Peas Extortioners.

The Food Administration announced tonight that steps were being taken to reduce the price of canned peas and beans. A statement issued said:

"According to reports made to the Food Administration, the canning industry has responded nobly to the demands for food conservation. The 1917 output of canned peas has reached the enormous total of nearly 10,000,000 cases of two dozen tins each, as compared with the previous record of approximately 9,000,000 in 1915 and about 6,500,000 in 1916.

"Most of these peas were sold by canners before the declaration of war, to be delivered this Fall after canning, and at prices to the wholesale trade ranging from 90 cents to $1 per dozen for the cheapest grade, to $1.20 for those of the medium size and price. There is, accordingly, no excuse for the extortionate prices being asked in some markets.

"Canners who are taking advantage of army purchases to deliver short to the trade in an unwarranted manner are being investigated. Jobbers and the large retailers have agreed to handle canned beans on a reasonable margin over actual cost, and the efforts of the Food Administration are now being directed toward insuring a reasonable price to the consumer."

CITY REGISTRATION BEGINS TO PICK UP

MANHATTAN TAKES A JUMP

Political Leaders Alarmed Over Falling Off—Look for Gains on Saturday.

Registration in all the boroughs of the city showed a big increase yesterday over the figures for the two previous days this year. The total registration in the entire city yesterday was 104,876, a gain of 22,808 over Tuesday's figures. This is close to the third day of last year when 108,291 registered. It is still far behind the third day figures of 1913, the last Mayoralty year, when 158,688 registered.

The total registration in all boroughs for the three days this year is 248,148. In 1913 the first three days showed a total of 501,244, while last year the total for the same period was 356,545.

Manhattan took a jump of 7,490 over Tuesday. The total for yesterday was 38,890, and the total for the three days this year was 108,472. These figures are still far behind the registration of both 1913 and 1916. In the former year the three-day total for Manhattan was 200,667, and for the three days last year it was 140,940.

The total registration in the Bronx yesterday was 15,059, and the total for the three days this year was 40,072. Four years ago the three days' total amounted to 62,985, and in 1916 it amounted to 47,167, so that the falling off this year in that borough as compared to the three days last year is only 7,000.

The total for Brooklyn yesterday was 38,477, which is 1,137 behind the third day last year. For the three days this year the total Brooklyn registration was 104,820. In 1913 the three day total for that borough was 179,380, and for the three days in 1916, a Presidential year, it was 131,297.

Queens made the best showing yesterday. Its registration was 10,148, as compared to 12,482 on the third day of 1913 and 10,108 for the third day last year. The total number of registrations in Queens so far this year amounts to 25,305. In 1913 the three-day total for the borough was 46,141, and for the three days last year it amounted to 30,300.

Political leaders became alarmed yesterday over the heavy falling off in the registration this year. The Fusion forces frankly declared that unless conditions improved redoubled efforts would be made to get the independent voter to the polls before the last day of registration, Saturday, expired.

Tammany leaders declared that their heavy registration would come at the end of the week, when the workers would have all day Saturday to go to the polls. Several explanations have been offered to explain the apparent apathy of the voters. The falling off during the first two days was laid to the stormy weather.

The tendency to delay because there are six days of registration, the change in polling places, and the departure of many voters with the troops were also given as possible reasons.

Following are the registration figures by boroughs for the third day of 1913, 1916, and this year:

Manhattan	65,699	41,374	38,890

FLANDERS VICTORS HOLD MOST GAINS

French Troops Gain More Ground Toward Houthulst Forest.

MORE PRISONERS CAPTURED

HEAVY WEATHER CONTINUES

By The Associated Press.

BRITISH FRONT IN FRANCE AND BELGIUM, Oct. 10.—The British and French armies, which yesterday made such a spectacular assault over the Flanders bog lands against the German defenses east and north of Ypres, were digging themselves in today along a line that represents an important gain. But the never-ending reaches of almost bottomless mud had during the past twenty-four hours robbed Field Marshal Haig's men of some of the laurels which they had won in such a remarkable manner.

Over much of the front involved the small bodies of hardy pioneers, who floundered forward through merciless morasses to the most forward positions that were reached, had been forced to fall back and rejoin their comrades on the main line of the advance. In some places this was due in part to German counterattacks, but for the main part the terrible condition of the ground was responsible.

Even today these rain-drenched, mud-caked, weary men were still reaching out for more ground. Late reports told of bodies of infantry that were far beyond the line which could be claimed as definitely held. What they may achieve only another day can tell.

The French line today was still nestled firmly almost at the edge of the great Houthulst Forest, and the poilus had even improved their line somewhat during the night.

On their immediate right the British also were established in positions some 2,000 yards in advance of their jumping off place of yesterday. They had surged forward to a line about 500 yards east of the Poelcapelle-Houthulst highway and had maintained themselves in the face of several vigorous enemy counterattacks.

From the region of Poelcapelle southward the British were establishing themselves along a line somewhat in the rear of the most advanced posts reached yesterday. The vile condition of the ground rather than the opposition of the Germans made it unfeasible for these pioneer troops to attempt to remain in the farthest posts reached.

Several enemy counterattacks along the Ypres-Staden railway and south of Houthulst Forest were quickly repulsed by artillery and machine-gun fire.

It rained hard again this morning, and the Allies were digging themselves in over a wilderness of pasty mud and water such as only Flanders can produce.

Sharp fighting still continued today around Polderhoek Château, in the zone of a small separate attack by the British south of the main offensive, but the operation in this sector had accomplished all that had been planned for it, and the situation at the château gave no cause for uneasiness.

Trapped in Shell Hole "Nests."

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FLANDERS, Oct. 10.—The new system of front-line defenses inaugurated by the Germans, who, instead of utilizing line trenches, organized nests of shell holes, proved a regular trap in the battle just ended. The German troops who occupied the craters without other shelter, when they found during the fighting that their officers were not with them, and not having immediate oversight, deserted as soon as the French approached. The German officers meanwhile were sheltered in concrete "pill boxes" further to the rear.

The correspondent spoke today with general prisoners, officers and men, all of whom seemed to be in a terrible condition of fatigue. The officers declared that their companies were reduced to a strength of only forty men, some of whom were mere boys of eighteen. The men said they were well provided with food while on the front lines, but that in the interior of the country the privations were great.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—Official reports from the British and French headquarters indicate a comparative absence of important operations today.

The night report of the French War Office reads:

> In Belgium there was no infantry action. Our troops were engaged in organizing the newly gained positions. The number of prisoners taken since yesterday morning exceeds 400.

The day report of the French War Office says of operations in this sector:

> In Belgium we made a further progress east of Draelbank, occupying Papegoet Farm and taking 40 prisoners. On our new front the enemy undertook only patrol operations.

The night report of the British War Office is as follows:

> In the course of the day hostile attacks against our new positions in the neighborhood of the Ypres-Staden Railway led to local fighting, but without effecting any material change in the situation.
>
> No further attacks have been made by the enemy, and our troops on the battle front have been actively engaged in organizing the positions captured yesterday, in spite of the great difficulties arising from the state of the ground. The artillery activity continued on both sides.
>
> The number of prisoners taken yesterday thus far reported is 2,083, including twenty-nine officers. This number includes 400 taken by the French. We also captured a few field guns and a number of machine guns and trench mortars.

The day report of the British War Office reads:

> The enemy delivered several counterattacks yesterday evening in the neighborhood of the Ypres-Staden Railway. All these were repulsed, but south of the railway, on a front of about 2,000 yards, our advanced troops were forced back a short distance. Other counterattacks made by the enemy northeast of Broodseinde during yesterday's fighting were repulsed with loss.
>
>

Lines Holding, Says Berlin.

BERLIN, Oct. 10, (via London.)—The German battle lines on the Flanders front from Poelcapelle to the south of Gheluvelt are held firmly by their defenders, says today's Army Headquarters report. Repeated hostile attacks upon this front of approximately eight miles broke down with the heaviest losses, it is stated.

Eleven British divisions were engaged in yesterday's battle in Flanders in addition to the French troops which attacked, the Staff announces.

South of Houthulst Wood yesterday the Allies captured about 1,500 meters of territory, the statement says, until their success was limited by a German counterattack.

The statement reads:

> Army Group of Crown Prince Rupprecht: Yesterday on the Flanders battlefield the French troops again went into battle by the side of eleven British divisions. The tremendous exertion of power on the part of the allied forces exhausted itself before the steadfastness of our Flanders warriors.
> Attacks which were delivered in the morning after the strongest drumfire were the introduction of a battle along the almost 20-kilometer front on the crater field between Bixschoote and Gheluvelt. This was fought until far into the night, accompanied by the most violent and continuous artillery activity. Our enemies repeatedly threw fresh forces into the battle, which often, and at some points as many as six times, assaulted our lines.
>
> South of Houthulst Wood the enemy captured about 1,500 meters of ground near Draelbank, Mangelare, and Veldhork and at the Poelcapelle Railway station, until a counterattack by our reserves struck him and limited his initial successes. From Poelcapelle to south of Gheluvelt our brave troops have their battle lines firmly in hand.
>

GREAT DEEDS DONE AGAINST OBSTACLES

British Troops Showed Their Power in Stroke Amid Rain and Mud.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WAR CORRESPONDENTS HEADQUARTERS ON THE BRITISH FRONT, Tuesday, Oct. 9.—Another battle has been fought and another successful advance has been made by the British troops today, with the French, in a great assault on their left.

The French gained about 1,200 yards of ground in two strides, captured hundreds of prisoners, many machine guns, and two field guns and killed large numbers of the enemy in this attack and in the bombardments which preceded it.

The allied troops are within a few hundred yards of that forest of which Marlborough spoke when he said, "Whoever holds Houltulst Forest, holds Flanders," and have gone forward about 1,500 yards in depth along a line beyond Poelcapelle, across the Ypres-Cheluvelt road.

The enemy again suffered great losses. Two new divisions which had just been brought into line, the 227th, straight from Rheims, getting into line at 3 o'clock this morning, while the 195th arrived from Russia, have received a fearful baptism of fire, and at least three other divisions have been hard hit and have given many prisoners from their raids into British hands.

Last night's attack might have seemed hopeless in the morning except to the men, who had weighed all the chances and had all the evidence in their hands. Evidence, I mean, of the measure of the enemy's strength and spirit, and took the responsibility of saying "Go" to the start of this new battle.

Through Darkness and Rain.

It was a black and dreadful night. The wind howled and raged across Flanders with long sinister wailings as it gathered speed and raced over the fields. The heavy stormclouds, hiding the moon and stars, broke and a deluge came down, drenching the British soldiers who marched along the roads and tracks, making ponds about them where they stood. It was cold with the coldness cutting the men with the sharp sword of the wind and there was no glimmer of light in the darkness.

To those who know the craterland of battlefields and with light kit or no kit have gone stumbling through it, picking their way between shell holes in the daylight, taking hours to travel a mile or two, it might have seemed impossible that great bodies of troops could go forward in an assault over such a country and win success in such conditions. That they did so is one more proof that the British troops have in them the heroic spirit which is above the normal laws of life, and that whatever the conditions may be they will face them and grapple with them, and if the spirit and flesh of man can do it, overcome the impossible itself.

This battle seems to me as wonderful as anything the British have done since the Highlanders and the naval division captured Beaumont Hamel in the mud and fog. It was more wonderful even than that, because on a greater scale and in more foul weather.

This morning I have been among men who lay out last night before the attack which followed the first gleams of dawn today, and who staggered and stumbled up to take part in the attack. These men I met had come back wounded. Only in the worst days of the Somme have I seen such figures. They were plastered from head to foot in wet mud, their hands and faces being covered with clay like the hands and faces of dead men.

They had tied bits of sacking round their legs and this was stuck on them with clots of mud. Their belts and tunics were covered with thick wet slime. They were soaked to the skin and their hair was stiff with clay.

They looked to me like men who had been buried alive and had been dug out again. And when I spoke to them I found that some of them had been buried alive and unburied while they still had life. They told me this simply as if it were the normal thing.

Others, without being flung down by a shell burst or buried in a crater, fell up to their waists in shell holes and up to their armpits and sank in water and mud.

A little group of men whom I knew had to make their way up to join in their unit's attack in the dawn. It was at dusk that this handful of men set out on the way up to the battle line, and it was only a few miles they had to go, but it took them eleven hours to go that distance, and they did not get to the journey's end until half an hour before they had to attack.

The wind blew against them, slapping their faces with their wet caps so that their flesh stung as at the slash of whips. It buffeted them against each other and clutched at their rifles, and tried to wrench their packs off their backs. The rain poured down upon them in fierce gusts until they were only dry where their belts crossed, and their boots were filled with water. It was pitch dark at the beginning of the night, and afterward there was only the light of the stars. They could not see a yard before them, but only the dark figure of the man ahead. Often that figure ahead fell suddenly with a shout. It had fallen into a deep shell hole and disappeared.

Somehow they got on, and that is the wonder of it. They got on to the line of attack half an hour before the guns were to start their drumfire, and they joined thousands of other men who had been lying out in shell holes all night, and were numbed with cold and waist-high in water.

Not all of them got there. The German guns had been busy most of the night, and big shells were coming. Over thirty men were killed or wounded with one shell, and others were hit and fell into water pools and lay there till stretcherbearers came to search for them.

My friends had traveled eleven hours and had had no food all that time. "I would have given my left arm for a drop of hot drink," said one of them. "I yas 'fair perished' with the cold."

They went over to the attack, these troops who were cold and hungry and exhausted after a dreadful night, and they gained their objective and routed the enemy and sent back many prisoners.

There were a number of German blockhouses in front of them beyond Abraham Heights and Gravenstafel. On their left there was a blockhouse called Peter Pan, though no little Mother Wendy would tell stories to her boys there.

German Troops Heavily Massed.

Beyond that little house of death were Wolf Copse and Wolf Farm, from which the fire of German machine guns came swishing in streams of bullets. There was no yard of ground without a shell-hole, they were linked together like the holes in honeycomb, and German troops were very thick because of their new methods of defense—very dense in the support lines, though the front line was more lightly held, the men being scattered about in these craters.

Large numbers were killed and wounded when the British barrage stormed over them, but numbers crouching in the old craters were left alive, and as the barrage passed they rose and came streaming over in small batches with their hands high. They came to meet the British, hoping for mercy.

Many prisoners were made before the first objective was reached, and after that by harder fighting some of the men in the shell holes, wet like the British and cold like them, decided to keep fighting and fired rifles as the British struggled forward. Not all the prisoners who were taken came down behind the British lines. The enemy was barraging the ground heavily, and many of their own men were killed and some of the British stretcher bearers as they came down with the wounded.

Up in the leafless and shattered trees on the battle field were Germans with machine guns and German riflemen, who sniped the British as they passed. Many of these were shot up in trees and came crashing down.

Up on the left of the attack, where the British linked up with the French, Germans were taken prisoners in great numbers, officers as well as men. The hostile bombardment was not so heavy as on the right, so that the casualties seem to have been light there.

In spite of the frightful ground, all the objectives were taken, so that the allied line was drawn close to Houlthulst Forest.

FRENCH ADVANCE SURPRISED THE FOE

One German Division Caught as It Was Being Relieved—Was Heavily Punished.

By G. H. PERRIS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY ON THE YSER, Tuesday, Oct. 9.—The French Army which, under General Anthoine, has been co-operating with the British armies on its right throughout the battle of Flanders advanced today along with them, pushing forward on a front of rather more than a mile and occupying during the morning more than half of the ground between its existing lines and the forest of Houthulst.

It will be remembered that at the end of July Anthoine's army held the Yser Canal from about Noordschote southward to near Boisinghe, and on July 31 attacked on the southern half of this line the part above the inundations, that is to say, as the left wing of the allied offensive. This attack, which was completely successful, brought the French right forward nearly three miles to a point north of Langemarck and east of Wyden Dreut, and a supplementary attack on Aug. 16 advanced the left to Driegrachten and a slight ridge overlooking the streams called Martje Vaert and Jeansbeek.

Today's program was again to swing forward the French right in touch with the British, so semi-circling Houthulst forest, which, in the course of the last three years, has become a formidable fortress of the enemy. The French guns have greatly reduced the value of this low-lying woodland and the artillery preparation for today's attack had been such that the German command had already withdrawn the heavier guns, hitherto secreted there, but in this flat land any sort of cover is important, and the bare stumps of the former forest would in any case remain a dangerous nest of machine guns and network of hidden defences.

In the face of such an obstacle, about two miles by three miles in extent, Anthoine's mastery of the new science of gunnery is an asset of the first value, and well has it been employed. Leaving their positions at 5:30 A. M., when the world was still buried in fog and gloom, the French troops of assault, preceded by an effective barrage, cleaned out without much difficulty the few remaining centres of German resistance along the east bank of the Jeansbeek and the Broenbeek, and within exactly two hours, with very small losses, had reached their first objectives. These extended from Draeibank to southeast of Mangelaere.

The attack seems to have come as a surprise to the enemy, who could not mistake the fierceness of the artillery preparation, but perhaps thought the Allies would not dare to attempt an actual assault in such unfavorable weather. However this may be, the French were fortunate enough to catch one enemy division just as it was being relieved by another, which, as is known from data obtained from prisoners, had just been brought from the Russian front. New to the sector, these men were in no condition to meet the dashing onslaught of the French. By 9 o'clock 300 prisoners, including three officers, had been taken, with two cannon and four machine guns. Three-quarters of an hour later the French right centre was in front of the scattered ruins that were once the small hamlet of Mangalaere. The first stage of the enterprise was a prompt and nearly costless success.

Just before 11 A. M. the second leap forward was made. The weather had now cleared a little, and cheered by some weak rays of sunshine and a feeling of what was already accomplished, the men strode forward with all the spirit for which the French infantry are famous.

So complete had been the bombardment that they found Mangelaere and Veldhoek villages smashed to pieces. At the same time as these brickheaps were occupied several blockhouses and half a dozen farm buildings were reduced.

In the stormy weather of these two days air work has been exceptionally difficult and perilous, but the French aviators carried out as far as it was humanly possible and with the utmost gallantry their essential tasks.

KERENSKY CABINET ASSUMES CONTROL

Coalition Ministers to Work for Early Peace in Agreement with the Allies.

PLANS A POWERFUL ARMY

Also to Bring Order to Country by Fighting Anarchy—Premier and Three Ministers Go to Front.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 10.—The new Coalition Government has assumed control of Russia, replacing the Council of Five organized a month ago. Announcement is made that it intends to carry out an active foreign policy with "the purpose of making peace in agreement with our Allies as soon as possible." Meanwhile the Government will take steps to bring the army to its highest fighting power and to restore economic and social tranquillity to the country.

Premier, A. F. KERENSKY.
Minister of Foreign Affairs, M. I. TERESTCHENKO.
Minister of Interior, M. NIKITIN.
Minister of Labor, M. GVOZDEFF.
Minister of Supplies, M. PROKOPOVITCH.
Minister of Finance, M. BERNATZKY.
State Controller, M. SMYRNOFF.
Minister of Education, M. SALASKIN.
President of the Ecumenical Council, M. TRETYAKOFF.
Minister of War, General VERKHOVSKY.
Minister of Marine, ADMIRAL VERDERVSKI.
Minister of Ways and Communications, M. LIVEREVSKY.

A. I. Konovaloff, Minister of Trade and Industry, has been appointed Vice President of the Council of Ministers.

Pledges of the Government.

In addition to carrying out an active foreign policy the new Government will issue an official statement declaring that the serious internal difficulty of Russia is due chiefly to the Korniloff rebellion. The new Government pledges that its business acts will be on the basis of agreements between representatives of the bourgeoisie, the tax-paying elements, and the revolutionary democracy. It points out that the success of such a program is possible only if the nation is united. The Government's statement in conclusion says that it has three principal aims:

To raise the fighting power of the army and navy.

To bring order to the country by fighting anarchy.

To call the Constituent Assembly as soon as possible.

The Cabinet is determined to ignore as far as possible the activities of the Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates and centre its efforts in gaining the support of the armies.

Premier Kerensky, the Minister of War, General Verkhovsky; the Foreign Minister, M. Terestchenko, and the Minister of Marine, Admiral Verdervski, have left for the front, where they will spend several days in placing before the soldiers the purposes of the coalition Ministry. M. Terestchenko will also confer with the allied military agents at the front and explain to them Russia's needs and devise schemes of co-operation which he will probably present before the allied war council at Paris. The Premier, it is said, will make a stop for the purpose of visiting General Korniloff, who is reported to be ill.

The Minister of Labor, M. Gvozdeff, has departed from Petrograd and will attempt to settle the strike in the oil fields at Baku. Other officials in the Ministry of Labor are endeavoring to bring the railway difficulties to a speedy termination.

From a Government source the statement is made that preparations for the removal of the Government to Moscow have been stopped, as there is no prospect that such removal will be necessary in the near future. No reason for the abandonment of the evacuation plan is forthcoming, but it is generally assumed that the improvement in the political outlook is the cause. Fears for the safety of Petrograd as a result of the capture by the Germans of Riga have subsided.

The new Cabinet seems to have met with the approval of the Petrograd press except the radical Novaia Nishin, which is pro-German. The Petrograd Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates announces in the Novaia Nishin that "we workmen and the garrison of Petrograd give the new Government no support. We are persuaded firmly that the announcement of the new Cabinet will get from all members of the revolutionary democracy one answer: Resign!"

The first session of the preliminary Parliament, which grew out of the Democratic Congress, will be called by the Government probably next week. In the meantime Minister of Public Welfare Kishkin and State Controller Smyrnoff have returned to Moscow to place the Kerensky plan before their followers for approval.

Fighting Forces to Vote.

The Government has published regulations for participation by the army and navy in elections of delegates to the Constituent Assembly. The army will be divided into five electoral divisions: North, including Finland; West, Southwest, Rumanian, and Caucasian. Two supplementary electoral districts provide for the Russian troops in France and the Balkans. The navy is divided into two electoral divisions: The Baltic and the Black Sea.

The military in other parts of Russia will take part in the elections under the same conditions as civilians.

The Diplomatic Corps in Petrograd is more optimistic over the situation than at any time for a month past. At present it seems to be considered that the only important political cloud on the horizon is the election of the radical, Leon Trotzky, to succeed N. C. Tcheidse as President of the Central Executive Committee of the Petrograd Council of Workmen's and Soldiers' Delegates. The committee of this council comprises four Bolshevik, two Social Revolutionists, and one Minimalist.

The Cabinet today discussed cooly the Bolshevik soldiers' and workmen's ultimatum declining to recognize the authority of the Government. The view being taken that the influence of this element is decreasing.

Premier Kerensky called upon David R. Francis, the American Ambassador, before leaving for the front. Ambassador Francis happened to be at the Foreign Office at the time, however, and the Premier left without explaining the purpose of his visit.

The new Government is facing some difficult tasks, including the revolt in Turkestan, from which district no communication has been received for three days, and the dissensions in Finland. It is considered in diplomatic circles, however, that the Government has now started upon an earnest effort to solve these problems.

CONFEREES ASSURE BRITISH OIL SUPPLY

America to Use Nearly 100 Tankers to Supply the Warships of Our Ally.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—An ample supply of fuel oil for the British Navy was assured today at a conference between British Government representatives, Standard Oil officials, and members of the Shipping Board. Oil reserves in Great Britain had run so low, the conference disclosed, that many British warships had been forced to remain inactive.

To remedy this situation, the Shipping Board will rush construction of fifty-eight oil tankers recently commandeered in shipbuilding yards, and is considering building at fewest forty more. The problem is entirely one of tonnage, as there is an abundance of oil on this side of the Atlantic.

Shipping Board officials made it clear that there was little likelihood of the United States being able to furnish ships to carry oil for merchant craft.

MUNICIPAL CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION

MAYOR DENIES CITY EMPLOYS OUTSIDERS

Says the 15 Men Named by Hylan Have Long Been Residents of New York.

SIX NOW SERVING IN WAR

Mayor Mitchel, answering the attack made upon him and his administration by Judge John F. Hylan, Tammany candidate for Mayor, in Brooklyn, Tuesday night, made public yesterday the history of the fifteen men mentioned by Mr. Hylan as being experts brought by the city from different sections of the country and who, according to Mr. Hylan, are now on the public payroll. According to the Mayor, few if any of these experts come from the places mentioned by Judge Hylan, while at least one is dead and others come under civil service rules. Judge Hylan promised, if elected, to return these men "to their own home town." Of the fifteen persons named by Judge Hylan the Mayor said only six are on the city payroll. Others, he said, are serving the country in France.

The Mayor also took up his opponent's statement that he would abolish a number of committees and thus save the taxpayers a million dollars or more. According to the Mayor four of the committees, or bureaus, named by Judge Hylan are made up of members of the Board of Estimate and do not cost a cent. In his speech Judge Hylan specifically mentioned W. L. Sears, former Superintendent of the Free Employment Bureau, who was brought to this city from Boston at a salary of $3,000 a year, as one he would send "back home" if elected. The Mayor pointed out that Mr. Sears has been dead since Nov. 15, 1915. The Mayor said in his statement:

"Of the 'million dollar patronage bonanza,' Judge Hylan was able to name only fifteen persons. Of these fifteen persons, that he proposes to remove from the city payroll, only six are on the payroll. He cannot very well remove Mr. Sears who is dead, and who, by the way, was appointed Superintendent of the City Employment Bureau because he was No. 1 on the Civil Service eligible list.

"Judge Hylan proposes to remove W. R. Smith, described as a 'supply expert, a foreign subject, a resident of Canada—$5,000 a year.' This proposal drew laughter and applause from his audience, who did not know that there was no such person on the city payroll. W. R. Smith, who prior to his appointment was employed by The New York Tribune, and who for many years has been a resident of New York, at one time held the position of Examiner, Purchase of Supplies, but Mr. Smith left the employment of the city on July 22, 1916, to become head of a large private manufacturing corporation.

"Judge Hylan proposes to remove Fulton Colville from a position of Salary Standard Expert at $2,400 a year. Judge Hylan made his audience laugh by saying that Mr. Colville was an expert from Atlanta, Ga. Mr. Colville is not employed by the City of New York, and has not been an employe since Feb. 27, 1915. He had been a resident of New York for about five years when he was appointed to a temporary position on Jan. 2, 1913.

"Judge Hylan named George B. Ford as a consultant expert from Newark, N. J., at a salary of $5,000 per year. Mr. Ford is not employed by the city, but is serving his country in France. He was not appointed as consultant from Newark, N. J. For about ten years before he was appointed to a temporary position in the city employ, he had been connected with the firm of George B. Post & Sons, architects, in this city.

"Another man marked for slaughter is J. J. Pearson, expert investigator from Lansing, Mich., $2,250 a year. The Judge will be disappointed to find that he cannot remove Mr. Pearson, because he is not a city employe, and was never employed by the city except for a period from Jan. 30, 1915, to Dec. 31, 1915. He was not appointed from Lansing, Mich., but for fifteen years he had had an office at 40 Wall Street, where he practiced as an engineer.

"This leaves only six employes out of the '$1,000,000 Bonanza.' One of these is John F. Sullivan, described by Judge Hylan as Consulting Engineer from Columbia, S. C., at $7,200 a year. Mr. Sullivan was never a resident of Columbia, S. C. His father at one time lived in Brooklyn, N. Y. The first position held by Mr. Sullivan was one in the Brooklyn Navy Yard, where he worked for five years. With the exception of eight months' service for the Government in Washington, he has never worked anywhere except in New York or Brooklyn.

"Judge Hylan's best hit with his audience last night was his description of the employment of J. L. Mann as engineer from San Domingo, West Indies, at $2,700 a year. J. L. Mann is not a dark colored native of the West Indies as the Judge led his audience to believe, but was born in Vermont, and has worked in the city of New York for many years. It is true that on account of his special ability he was sent to San Domingo to serve as Director General of Public Works at one time. Mr. Mann is still connected with the city, but is on leave of absence while in war service. No doubt Judge Hylan will take particular delight in having Mr. Mann removed while he is away serving his country.

"The Judge described J. P. Fox as a transit expert from Cambridge, Mass., at a salary of $3,000 a year. Mr. Fox was not brought from Cambridge, Mass., but his first public employment in this city was by the old Rapid Transit Railroad Commission in 1905 and 1906. He had other employment in this city until 1908, when he entered the employment of the Metropolitan Sewage Commission of New York City, a body over which the City Administration had no control. In 1912 he was employed by the Corporation Counsel in the Passaic Valley Sewage case. In 1913 he was employed by the Committee on Hospital Inquiry, and in 1914 he was employed by the Committee on City Plan.

HILLQUIT AIDS SUFFRAGE.

Socialist Asks Mitchel, Hylan, and Bennett to Join Him.

Morris Hillquit, Socialist candidate for Mayor, has sent an open letter to the other candidates for the office, John Purroy Mitchel, John F. Hylan, and William M. Bennett, asking each to make a special appeal to his supporters to vote for woman suffrage.

"If each of us will make a special and earnest appeal to his supporters to vote for women suffrage the measure will carry and we shall be instrumental in righting an age-long wrong. Knowing the great importance of the direct and indirect issues involved in the city campaign, I assert that the issue of woman suffrage overshadows them all as a permanent measure of social justice and progress."

HILLQUIT WILL BE COSTLY.

Morris Hillquit, Socialist candidate for Mayor, admitted in a speech last night at the Central Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association at 55 Hanson Place, Brooklyn, that a Socialist administration might add several millions of dollars to the cost of city government, but he contended that the advantages to the people would be more than worth it.

Mr. Hillquit denied that Kaiserism was an issue in the campaign.

COLER COUNTED OUT, BENNETT CHARGES

Tells Brooklyn Voters the Democrats Committed Greater Frauds Than Republicans.

INSISTS RUSH WAS ROBBED

District Attorney in Kings to Present Alleged Irregularities to Grand Jury.

Speaking before the Brooklyn Civic Club in Brooklyn yesterday, William M. Bennett, nominee for Mayor at the recent Republican primaries, called upon Judge Hylan, the Tammany candidate, to demand that the Democratic ballot boxes be opened.

He declared that greater frauds were committed at the Democratic primary than at the Republican primary, and that if the Democratic ballots in Kings were recounted it would be found that Bird S. Coler had been nominated instead of Edward Riegelmann, the Democratic organization candidate, and that if the ballot boxes in Manhattan were opened it would be shown that Thomas E. Rush had been defrauded of thousands of votes. After warning the residents of Brooklyn not to let the "Tiger cross the bridge," Mr. Bennett said:

"The overshadowing issue in this campaign is the frauds at the recent primary. If, after a man has voted at the primary or at the election, the Inspectors are to be allowed to tear up the ballot, then you might as well have an autocrat to run the city, for that would mean the end of democracy. The time has now come for Mr. Hylan to demand that the Democratic ballot boxes be opened.

"Greater frauds were committed at the Democratic primary than were committed at the Republican primary. If the Democratic ballot boxes should be opened in Kings it would turn out that Bird S. Coler had been nominated for Borough President instead of Riegelman, and if the Democratic ballot boxes should be opened in Manhattan it would soon appear that Thomas E. Rush had been defrauded of thousands of votes and perhaps have been defrauded of enough to have nominated him.

"I cannot have the Democratic ballot boxes opened. Section 88. of the Election law provides that any candidate whose name is on the ballot can have the boxes opened and the ballots inspected. My name is not on the Democratic ballots, and therefore I cannot make this application. Mr. Hylan's name is on the Democratic ballots in all boroughs. He therefore has the right to demand that the Democratic boxes be opened. I have pledged myself that this shall be the last dishonest primary in New York City. I have done my part in having the Republican boxes opened and the ballots reinspected and in turning over to the respective District Attorneys the data which I have obtained.

"It is now up to Mr. Hylan to do the same for his party and take his stand with me in defense of the principle that every man is entitled to one vote, and is entitled to have that one vote counted."

District Attorney Harry E. Lewis of Kings County announced yesterday that his investigation of alleged fraud in the Democratic primary in Brooklyn had already revealed "gross irregularities," and that he would present the facts to the Grand Jury. Surprising gains for Bird S. Coler, who was an independent candidate for the Democratic nomination for Borough President, have been found by Mr. Lewis, and a recount of the entire vote cast for Coler and Edward Riegelmann, the organization designee, may be ordered. On the face of the returns Riegelmann defeated Coler by 1,262 votes.

"In one district," said Mr. Lewis, "according to the official returns, Bird S. Coler is credited with 27 votes and Edward Riegelmann with 84 votes. The votes actually cast were 56 for Coler and 58 for Riegelmann, making a change of 55 votes in this election district. In another election district the official count credited Coler with 50 votes and Riegelmann with 82 votes, when a correct counting of the ballot shows that Coler should have received 65 votes and Riegelmann but 60 votes, a difference of 37 votes.

In these districts and in others where the examination has disclosed facts calling for prosecution, the matters will be submitted presently to the Grand Jury. Mr. Lewis also found some mistakes in the Mitchel-Bennett count in Brooklyn. He declined to say what districts were affected. When Mr. Coler was told of the District Attorney's discoveries he said he did not believe that the irregularities were widespread.

"The District Attorney," he said, "makes references to two election districts, which, I understand, were in an Assembly district where there was an old personal grudge against me, and where foolish men may have allowed that grudge to impel them to a criminal act."

Mr. Coler himself has not given any encouragement to those who would have a recount of the vote. After the primaries he came out in support of Riegelmann.

Charles E. Mitchell Says Conscription of Wealth Would Follow Failure of Loan.

J. P. Morgan Predicts Loan Will Be a Success

J. P. Morgan, asked yesterday to comment upon the progress of the Liberty Loan campaign, said:

"The Loan is going to be a success. Of course, it means a great deal of hard work—hard work right up until Oct. 27. But if this hard work is done, if the American people understand the size of the task, then there should be no doubt that the Secretary of the Treasury will receive subscriptions to the amount that he is seeking. We are starting with a much better organization than we had three months ago. We have a right to expect a much larger number of subscribers, and that is just as important as the total amount subscribed.

"I understand that there is in some quarters a feeling of pessimism caused by declining security markets. It seems to me that this does not change the duty of every American to do everything possible. After all, what the security market does within the next month or two will not be of much importance one year from now. On the other hand, whether the war is won or lost is a matter of supreme importance. What the American people do in relation to the Liberty Loan may determine this question, and, therefore, the course of the world's history for all time."

Subscriptions to the Second Liberty Loan received in the New York Federal Reserve District up to the close of business last night totaled approximately $300,000,000, according to conservative estimates. The gain for the day was only $15,000,000, and for the three days of the current week about $60,000,000. In other words, the applications reported or filed in three days is less than the daily average of $62,500,000 which the Liberty Loan Committee has set as its goal in an endeavor to obtain a billion and a half dollars of subscriptions in the four weeks' campaign. On this basis, the New York district is $262,500,000 behind at the end of the first nine business days. While the day's increase in subscriptions reported was $15,000,000, the records of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York indicated an increase of about $40,000,000, the final figures showing an aggregate of $214,374,250 of subscriptions on which the 2 per cent. initial payment has been made and which had officially been reported to the Reserve Bank.

The Leading Subscriptions.

Guiterman, Rosenfeld & Co.	25,000

Some of the subscriptions appearing in the above tabulation are the results of the active campaigns being carried on by the various trade committees. Subscriptions in the shipping trade already total $6,000,000, and the jewelry trade has collected subscriptions amounting to $2,125,850.

Says Bonds Must Be Bought.

Charles E. Mitchell, President of the National City Company, in an address yesterday at the Maritime Exchange warned the country that conscription of wealth would surely follow if the Liberty Loan were not fully subscribed.

"It is a question of will you now voluntarily subscribe to this prime security of bonds, or will you have your wealth levied upon by the Government in the months that are to come?" Mr. Mitchell said. "The national budget this year calls for $20,000,000,000. You men here, as well as every other citizen of the United States, must come up to the scratch. You must buy these bonds. To do so, you will have to borrow. There is two billion dollars in cash now in the banks of the country. Go to them—get money—take part of the issue now."

Three days of active campaigning among the national army at Camp Upton, Yaphank, L. I., has resulted in subscriptions to the amount of $126,150.

It was banner day at the little "Liberty Bank" in Madison Square yesterday. There were $81,550 worth of bonds sold, with one for $75,000, which was taken for Mrs. Isaac L. Rice by her daughter, Miss Marjory Rice. The subscription is in the name of the Isaac L. Rice Home for Convalescents at North Tarrytown. James J. Smith of 2,745 Eighth Avenue took a $3,000 bond, and another man, who did not wish his name given, one for $1,000. Isaac Stoneglass of 2,761 Marion Avenue gave a certified check for a $600 bond. Among the subscribers was an elderly little Irish woman, Miss Theresa Hughes, of 275 West 148th Street, who paid cash for a $100 bond, bringing the money in bills pinned into a neat black petticoat. Many of the subscribers during the day were foreigners. A letter was received yesterday from Miss Helen Taft, daughter of ex-President Taft, offering her services in the bank. She will give as much time as may be desired after the 15th. Miss Taft will be asked to sell bonds. Governor Whitman, Police Commissioner Woods, and James M. Beck have promised to speak at noonday meetings held at the "Liberty Bank."

Navy to Have Loan Day.

Liberty Loan Navy Day has been definitely fixed for next Wednesday, Oct. 17. It is planned to make the occasion a demonstration on the part of the men of the navy that they are not only willing to risk their lives in battle, but also to back their government by the purchase of Liberty bonds. Between 3,000 and 4,000 bluejackets and marines will land at the Chelsea Piers and march via Twenty-third Street and Broadway to the U. S. S. Recruit in Union Square. At the Recruit there will be speeches by naval officers and others and a number of special features.

An organization has been formed to promote the sale of Liberty Loan bonds by the co-operative savings and building loan association of New York State and Northern New Jersey. At a recent convention of the United States League of these associations, representatives of twenty-four State leagues being present, a national committee for war service was formed with a Chairman for each of the twelve Federal Reserve districts.

Some of the smaller cities and towns in the New York Federal Reserve District have done exceptionally good work in collecting subscriptions to the loan. The following table gives the quota, based on a total of $1,500,000,000 for the district, the total of applications received in the first nine days of the campaign, and the percentages of receipts to the allotments:

Town.	Quota.	Subscription.	Per cent.
Red Creek, N. Y.	$7,500	$3,050	40
Aurora, N. Y.	63,000	11,250	18
Cazenovia, N. Y.	106,500	114,750	108
Ogdensburg, N. Y.	826,500	293,500	35
Greene, N. Y.	79,500	14,250	18
Albany	11,836,500	2,970,150	25
Cold Springs, N. Y.	60,000	89,550	149
Verona, N. J.	18,000	5,600	31

Urges "Use of the Knife."

Byron R. Newton, formerly Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and now Collector of the Port of New York, made the following statement regarding the loan:

"This war is a surgical operation. We are cutting out a malignant cancer from civilization. The sooner the operation is performed the sooner the world will be relieved from its suffering. The task must be performed with the knife. There is no use temporizing with lotions or salves. Pay the surgeon's bill now and let civilization get well and healthy. But, unlike most doctors' bills, we will get our money back, with 4 per cent. interest."

Edwin G. Merrill, President of the Union Trust Company, in discussing the loan yesterday, said that he desired to call special attention to one feature which appeared to be misunderstood. "The fact that the 4 per cent. bonds are subject to the surtax," he said, "has already made a good many reluctant to subscribe, in view of the very high rates of surtax fixed by the new law. It is not generally known that the number of people actually affected by this is very limited. Only to those whose incomes are in excess of $60,000 a year will the 4 per cent. bonds be worth less than the 3½s—which were free of all tax—and to those whose incomes are less than $40,000 a year the 4s will be worth materially more than the 3½s."

The Ward Baking Company, which operates in nine cities, and has more than 4,000 employes, announced yesterday that it had agreed to facilitate the purchase of bonds by its employes in every possible way.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York made public yesterday copies of a Treasury Department circular on the subject of special Government deposits made with banks and trust companies which purchase certificates of indebtedness or Liberty Loan bonds. The chief interest in the circular lies in the description of securities available as collateral security for Government deposits. In the main, the provisions are about the same as those which were announced when the first Liberty Loan was floated, but in some particulars they are more liberal. Thus it includes obligations of foreign cities and provinces, while the last regulations excluded them. This change in the rules will permit banks to make use of the bonds of the French cities and of the Canadian provinces as collateral.

COUNTRY AROUSED BY LOAN.

Bonds Are Selling Rapidly and Record Is Being Established.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—While no figures are available showing the total thus far subscribed by the country in the second Liberty Loan drive, reports from all parts of the country indicate that the bonds are selling rapidly and that a real record is being established.

Quickened action among the host of Liberty bond salesmen engaged in the $5,000,000,000 drive is indicated in official reports received today by the Treasury Department. Business interests, particularly in New York, are throwing their best salesmen into the work, that the bonds may be sold and the attention of the country moved on quickly to some other phase of its war needs, while the inexperienced salespeople, men, women, and children, eager to help, are catching the dynamic spirit of those with experience.

Aside from results being obtained from actual salesmanship, the attention that is being attracted to the sale by various "stunts" conceived by local organizations is encouraging. Crowds are showing intense interest in all attractions, from bell-ringing to bonfires, police being required in some cities to keep the throngs moving past Liberty bond headquarters, hence confidence is aroused that the message of the loan is getting home to the people, and sooner or later sales among those thus attracted are bound to result.

In the New York district, where the drive for the biggest single amount is being made, it is pointed out here the sale has settled down to a "steady grind," with high hopes for obtaining the maximum amount.

Postmaster General Burleson announced today in a letter to Secretary McAdoo that a bondholder may receive his interest by merely presenting his coupons or treasury warrants issued in payment of interest on registered bonds to any Postmaster. They will be cashed immediately. Postmasters will be reimbursed from Washington for all coupons and warrants which they cash.

The United States Treasury and Sub-Treasuries and banks also will pay interest when due, as heretofore. Post Offices simply are designated as additional agencies for cashing when due and presented for payment the coupons and interest warrants of Liberty Loan bonds.

The Controller of the Currency suggested today to all national banks that they address a personal communication by letter or postal card to every depositor or rather to those whose deposits amount to $200 or more, calling attention to Liberty bonds and offering to accommodate any purchaser who may need more time to make his payments than may be allowed by the terms of subscription. It is also recommended that the rates of interest charged to purchasers of Liberty bonds shall be made as favorable as possible for the buyer.

GOV. BEECKMAN TAKES $200,000

Largest Subscriber in Rhode Island —New England Total Grows.

Special to The New York Times.

NEWPORT, R. I., Oct. 10.—Governor R. Livingston Beeckman came to the fore today, taking $200,000 of Liberty Bonds through the local committee. By this subscription Governor Beeckman stands as the largest individual purchaser of these bonds in Rhode Island.

BOSTON, Oct. 10.—Additional Liberty Loan subscriptions of $6,540,000 for the twenty-four-hour period ending [illegible] A. M. today, as reported through the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, brought the New England total since the opening of the campaign to $42,183,000. The total is based on overnight reports from 830 of the 1,073 banks in the district, and takes in all subscriptions up to the close of business yesterday in the territory within a twelve-hour mailing radius of Boston. Under the present plan of issuing only one report each day, the New England General Committee has explained that many subscriptions do not reach here in time to be included in the total, and go over to the next day at noon, at which hour daily figures are announced.

Total subscriptions by States are: Maine, $2,059,000; New Hampshire, $1,201,000; Vermont, $1,290,000; Rhode Island, $6,813,000; Connecticut, $6,142,000; Massachusetts, $24,678,000.

Subscriptions reported by the committee included: United Fruit Company, $1,000,000; Shawmut Steamship Company, $200,000; Dorchester Trust Company, $150,000.

PETERSBURG, Va., Oct. 10.—The 319th Infantry of the Eightieth Division, national army, at Camp Lee, has pledged itself to take $500,000 of Liberty bonds. The officers, numbering 100, will take $500 each. Each officer pledges himself to place $500 among personal friends. The enlisted men will take $100,000. It is proposed to place the other $100,000 by granting leaves of absence to two men in each company of the regiment and send them home to place the amount. The regiment is made up of Pittsburgh men, many of whom are wealthy.

SONG FOR LOAN CAMPAIGN.

Will Be Rendered by Boy Scouts in Streets and Theatres.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Oliver Herford has written a Liberty Loan campaign song. It goes to the tune of "Over There" and is to be sung by trained choruses of Boy Scouts in city streets and theatres. The first verse and the chorus go this way:

Help to down the Hun, down the Hun, down the Hun;
Money talks, let money shout!
Turn your pockets inside out!
Help them over yond', over yond', over yond';
Let your gold flow in a stream,

CHORUS.

Over here! Give a cheer!
Tell the lads over there not to fear;
That the ranks are swelling, and the scouts are yelling,
And the bonds are selling, over here;
Never fear, never fear,
We are all on the job over here;
Tell the Kaiser he'll be wiser
When he meets the troops were raising fo' him here.

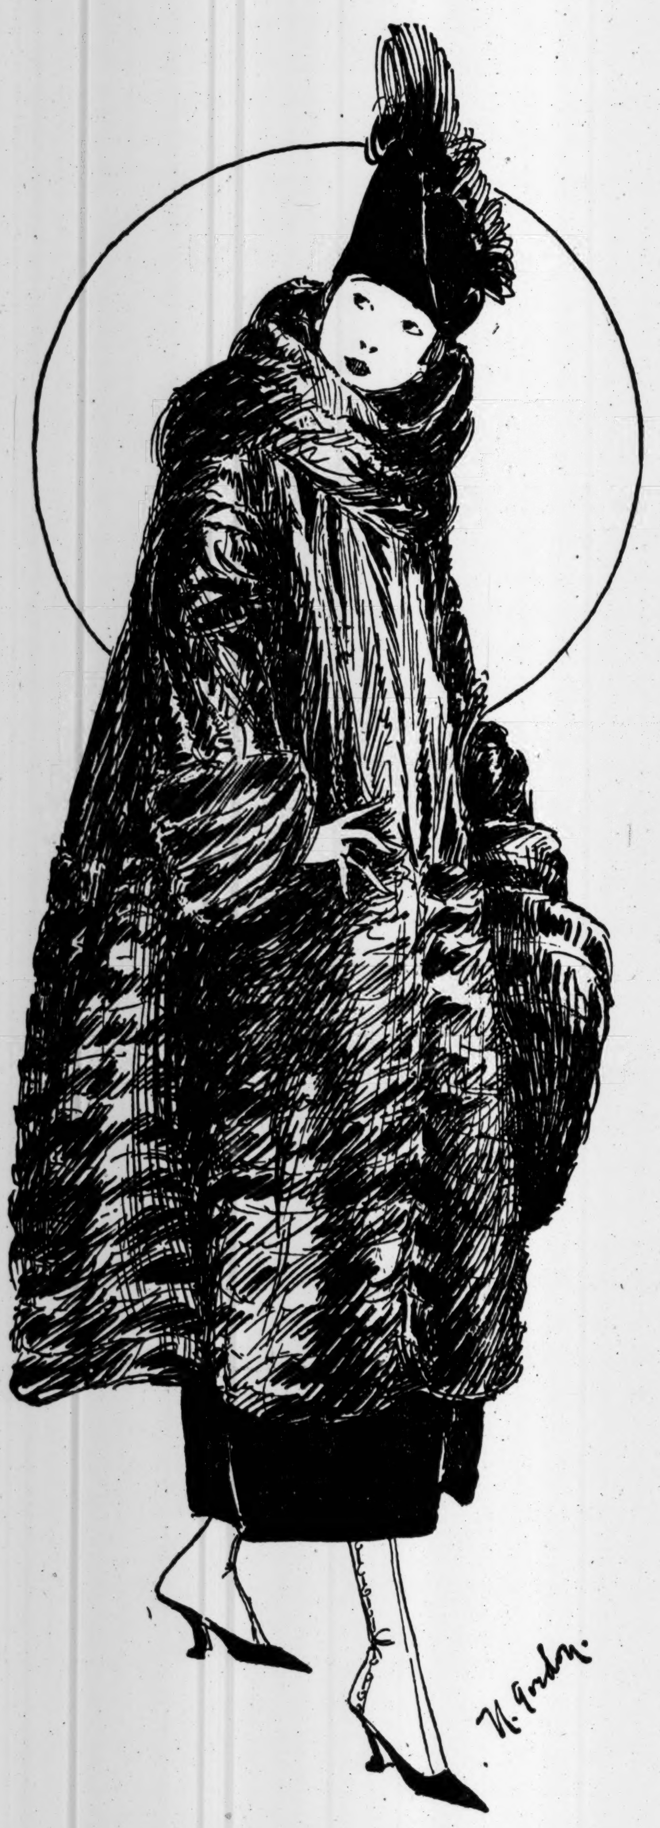
Beauty and the Beast



FINE furs no longer must be wasted. That the world of Fashion is constantly finding new beauties in the furs of beasts further complicates a difficult situation. With a rapidly diminishing supply, Fur Administration has become almost as necessary as Food Administration. As the foremost fur house in the fur centre of the world—the creators of fashions which are inevitably followed, H. Jaeckel & Sons have set a new standard of Utility and Economy in Furs which they commend to fashionable womankind.

The Charm of Genuine Furs Has Not Suffered by Commercialism

The wilder, more elusive the animal, the more beautiful it is. It is one of the ironies of Nature. But it has to do with the actual value of the fur, which is regulated by cost of production, as all legitimate values are regulated. The Siberian sable is expensive, and growing more so, but its costliness is justified by the difficulty experienced in procuring it not less than by the regal brilliance of the fur.

In the old days the noble knight ventured into the wilderness, suffering hardship and the perils of the hunt, to lay at the feet of his lady fair a collection of beautiful pelts. There was the fragrance of charming romance in the rare furs she wore—rivals of the costliest jewels in their beauty and full of warmth and utility.

That same fragrance of romance—that pride of possession—to-day exists in the highest types of furs, as segregated from the ordinary commercialized kind.

Only a few years ago the silver fox was a glory unto itself in the fur world. The animal was rarely encountered in the forests. Its rich coat was seldom seen in the avenues of fashion.

To-day the sight of what is termed silver fox is not uncommon. What a large portion of the public does not recognize is that there is a vast difference in silver foxes.

One is a highly prized animal—a rare individual, upon whose trail an Alaskan or Siberian trapper has spent many weary weeks. Another was raised on a farm in Canada—one of the "domesticated wild animal" furs.

They are like the genuine and the synthetic ruby—the diamond and the doublet; and the existence of the inferior one is not sufficient reason for discarding the genuine. It merely gives you cause for caution as to where your selections should be made.

And as there are furs of "wild animals" which have been too much domesticated, so there are fur fashions which have been too much commercialized—styles which one may judge to be more or less in vogue, but which in reality are not selected with sufficient knowledge.

Shifting Styles and Changing Silhouettes Need Not Mean Extravagant Outlay

Never before has there been so much fashion—so much attractiveness—put in furs as at the present moment. Utility in fur garments requires that the fashions shall be serviceable as well as the furs.

It is not enough that they be superficially beautiful. If their beauty—their complete adaptability to the fashions of the moment—passes in a season, they are quite as extravagant as if their quality were inferior.

As "America's Leading Furriers," it has been the practice of this house to extend the usefulness of its designs, as well as its furs, over as long a period as practical. Its organization of designers in Paris and New York look upon one season as being merely the forerunner of the next—and this year, in particular, has special stress been laid upon the point.

Throughout these assortments of the world's finest furs—larger than ever before in the history of the house—this standard of Utility runs, emphasizing at every point the prime essentials of economy and prudence:

First, to procure the best furs you can buy.

Second, to get only those fur fashions which you know to be correct.

There is no more certain way to waste than to purchase furs which are of inferior quality, or styles that are copied a season too late.

It may be a fur scarf at $75 or $100, or it may be a handsome wrap of black Eastern mink or sable—a silver fox piece, an opera wrap, or a motor coat of the sturdier furs; the H. Jaeckel & Sons' production represents the quality and correctness which not only give pride of possession, but assure the greatest return for the investment, in actual intrinsic value and service.

LABOR SHORTAGE IN SHIPYARDS SERIOUS

Manufacturers in Other Lines May Be Asked to Lend Workers to Help Out.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The labor shortage in the great shipbuilding yards has presented another serious problem, and Chairman Hurley of the Shipping Board and Admiral Capps, General Manager of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, are seeking a solution in order to speed up construction. These officials have found that at Sparrow Point, near Baltimore, the yards are working at not more than 50 per cent. of capacity simply because the workmen cannot be obtained. Similar conditions, it is said, have been reported from other shipyards on the Atlantic Coast.

Recruiting for the army has been responsible to a certain extent, but there are many other reasons which contribute to the present situation, and one of the most important is the fact that the housing facilities at most of the great yards are inadequate. Mr. Hurley conferred with Secretary of War Baker today on this question, and it is understood that action will be taken speedily, in co-operation with the Council of National Defense, of which Secretary Baker is Chairman, to have homes for the workmen provided by the Government.

Efforts will also be made to stop employers in other industries not as essential to the war program as ship construction from endeavoring to win labor away from the shipyards. If the situation does not adjust itself, drastic action may be proposed. Manufacturers of commodities not directly used for warfare may even be asked to contribute a part of their working force to the Government cause in order to get the merchant fleet on the seas at the earliest moment possible.

Thaw, who was adjudged insane after attempting suicide here, is in a local asylum, where he was committed some time ago by a Committee on Lunacy.

DEPRECATES FEARS OF A COAL FAMINE

NO FIGURES ON DEMAND

Anthracite Supply Also Increased—Country's Operators to Confer—Canadian Embargo Lifted.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—After many conferences with coal operators, a statement was made public tonight by the Fuel Administration deprecating reports that the country would be faced by an acute coal famine during the coming Winter, which would cripple industry and cause suffering.

Dr. H. A. Garfield, the Fuel Administrator, asserted that the bituminous coal production for the year would be 10 per cent. greater than last year, despite the reports that mines in some parts of the country had shut down.

"The question of shortage this year," Dr. Garfield said, "will depend then upon whether the American demand has increased by more than the 10 per cent. increase in production. If our industrial development, from the war and other causes, has grown beyond that, then we must go short. We have no figures at hand to tell what that development has been."

The Fuel Administration, it was announced, has lists showing the location of more than 3,000,000 tons of free coal—coal not under contract—and bona fide domestic requirements are being taken care of whenever specific, authentic statements of shortage are furnished. In connection with the Canadan situation, it was said that the embargo had been lifted and that that country was being supplied on a pro rata basis, substantially as if it were a State of the Union.

In connection with the anthracite situation, L. A. Snead of the Fuel Administration announced that the production for the country during the past nine months had been 7,000,000 tons in excess of the tonnage of last year during the same period. It is understood that representatives of the anthracite interests have been summoned to discuss means of obtaining even larger production.

Reports of mines closing and of efforts of operators and distributers to evade the law or create an artificial condition which might work for an increase in the Government's fixed rates do not arouse apprehension. Agents of the Federal Trade Commission and the Department of Justice are keeping in close touch with the situation, and any ulterior effort will be the signal for proceedings against the offender.

The National Coal Association has again given Dr. Garfield assurances that it will co-operate with the Government and will make a determined attempt to see that production is sufficient for the country's needs. To this end a call has been sent out to all operators for a meeting in Pittsburgh on Oct. 23. This announcement is made:

"The National Coal Association deems it imperative that coal producers should meet in a general conference for consideration of the present conditions of the industry. The men in this business must see to it that sufficient coal is mined and shipped to meet the needs of the nation. At the same time, the industry must adjust itself to Government regulation, so as to insure the fullest co-operation between the operators on the one hand and the officials of the Government on the other. These conditions demand the best constructive action which this industry can devise."

Government figures made public by the Fuel Administration today showed that last year the bituminous coal mined was in excess of 502,000,000 tons. The estimate for this year was placed at 552,000,000 tons.

HOUSE SEES WILSON ABOUT PEACE DATA

Staff of Experts to be Organized for Mapping Out Plans Under Many Heads.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Systematic collection of economic, historical, political and other information on European conditions to be used eventually in peace negotiations was discussed today by Colonel E. M. House with President Wilson, Secretary Lansing and other Government officials. Some announcement is expected soon concerning the organization of a staff of experts which Colonel House will gather to assist him, and the various classifications into which the work will be divided.

Walter Lippmann, New York magazine editor, until recently volunteer assistant to Secretary Baker, is one of the assistants Colonel House has chosen and is devoting his time especially to mapping out a preliminary plan for collecting data under well defined heads.

ECONOMY, KEYNOTE OF HYLAN'S SPEECH

Tells Cleveland Democracy There Will Be No Waste in Useless Courthouse Site, if Elected.

Speaking last night at a dinner of the Cleveland Democracy at the Hotel Astor given in honor of the candidates for city offices on the Tammany ticket, Judge Hylan, the Mayoralty nominee, told 1,200 diners what he would do if elected. A large part of the gathering was made up of well-known Tammany men, many of whom had never seen their candidate before, and they applauded when Judge Hylan told how he would send to their "own home town" all the so-called efficiency experts which he said had been brought to this city by the Fusion Administration. Tammany Leader Charles F. Murphy and John H. McCooey, Democratic leader of Brooklyn, sat directly in front of the speakers' table.

Judge Hylan, Mr. Murphy, and Mr. McCooey, just before the dinner, met in the hotel corridor and had a hearty handshake, while a number of the "faithful" crowded around. Throughout his speech, which the Tammany candidate read from manuscript, there was liberal applause.

Judge Hylan dwelt at length upon the accomplishments of Grover Cleveland and then said he stood uncompromisingly upon the platform of his party. He then told what he expected to accomplish, if elected, saying:

"There are some flagrant examples of waste, extravagance, or worse which will go down in history as the scandals of the Mitchel-Prendergast administration. They could never occur under an administration which gave any thought to the interests of rent-payers and taxpayers.

"If I am elected Mayor there will be no 'intimate friend' to unload useless real estate on the city at profits to the extent of millions.

"There will be no repetition of the waste of $12,000,000 in the purchase of a useless Court House site.

"If elected Mayor the railroads of this city had better prepare for an extensive movement beyond our borders of the tax-eating fake experts imported by Mitchel, Prendergast and their colleagues at the dictation of the influences which have dominated their administration. The people got along without these so-called experts before Mr. Mitchel came into office, and they will be glad to get along without them after he goes out of office.

Judge Hylan declared he would banish the Gary system if elected. He promised reform in the Health Department and the Charities Department. He attacked the Administration's handling of the West Side Improvement plan and denounced the establishment of a garbage disposal plant on Staten Island.

MODIFIES BOND TAXATION.

Ruling Excludes Certain Securities Held by Non-Resident Decedents.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—The Internal Revenue Bureau today announced that bonds of domestic corporations owned by non-resident decedents, if physically situated outside the United States, are not returnable as a portion of the gross estate of the decedent. The Revenue act of Sept. 8, 1916, in defining the gross estate, provides that stock in a domestic corporation owned and held by a non-resident decedent shall be deemed property within the United States. It has been held that bonds of a domestic corporation owned and held by a non-resident decedent were likewise property within the United States and taxable as a portion of the gross estate.

Coal Scarce in Denmark.

COPENHAGEN, Oct. 10. — The hope that the railroads this year would be able to handle coal shipments necessary to keep the people warm has proved vain, and there again is talk of a transportation crisis, though the scare is less extensive than last Winter.

REPUBLICAN LEADER INDICTED FOR FRAUD

GAVE MITCHEL ALL VOTES

Paper Filed with Election Board After Recount Demand Carried Correct Figures.

The Grand Jury returned indictments yesterday charging Samuel Krulewitch, a Republican district leader, and his son, Alvin Krulewitch, with inducing Election Inspectors to return a false count on the number of ballots cast in the recent primaries in the Third Election District of the Seventeenth Assembly District, on the east side of Harlem. Krulewitch and his son were arraigned before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions, and both pleaded not guilty. The father was held in $2,500 bail and the son in $1,500.

The evidence upon which Krulewitch and his son were indicted was presented with the aim of showing that both men actively interfered with the correct counting of the ballots. The witnesses were Louis Davis, a Democratic Inspector and Chairman of the Election Board in that district; Moritz Schauer, a Republican Inspector; Philip Cohen, a Democratic Inspector, and Patrolman Timothy Hynes, who was on duty at the polling place.

According to the testimony of these witnesses, Alvin Krulewitch entered the polling place just as the primaries were about to close and demanded that Schauer yield him his place at the table. Krulewitch, the witnesses declared, insisted that Schauer was sick, and could not undertake to count the ballots. Schauer would not leave, and Davis refused to swear Krulewitch in as an Inspector. Krulewitch, according to the evidence, persisted in his attempt to seize control of the ballot boxes, and Davis finally called Policeman Hynes to eject him from the polling place.

A few minutes later Krulewitch returned with his father, who demanded that his son be allowed to count the ballots. Davis still refused to swear Alvin in. The elder Krulewitch then pushed the Democratic Inspector and Chairman aside and exclaimed, according to the testimony: "You mind your own business. You look after your own ballots and we will look after ours."

Alvin Krulewitch then sat down and counted the ballots and recorded forty-eight for Mitchel and none for Bennett. On the Sunday following the primaries, however, when Bennett was calling loudly for a recount, Alvin Krulewitch, according to the evidence before the Grand Jury, called upon Davis, notified him that there had been an error in his return, and presented a corrected memorandum showing thirty-five votes for Mitchel and eight votes for Bennett. This memorandum was subsequently filed with the Board of Elections, and the figures were borne out by the recount.

Twelve of the election Inspectors who were indicted on Tuesday were arraigned before Judge Mulqueen yesterday and released under $1,000 bail each. They were Edward Flynn of 614 Water Street, Leo Lewis of 221 East Broadway, Thomas Fitzpatrick of 607 Water Street, Abraham Lipsky of 50 Pike Street, David Lobel of 224 East 115th Street, Joseph F. Periconi of 241 East 113th Street, Harry Michaelson of 1,777 Madison Avenue, Ike Greenwald of 71 East 116th Street, Nathan Eisenberg of 1,775 Madison Avenue, Ignatz Waldman of 14 East 110th Street, Edmil Mendelsohn of 63 East 108th Street, Aaron Lissberger of 627 Madison Avenue.

Samuel Krulewitch, the indicted Republican leader, lives at 1,664 Madison Avenue, and is employed as cashier in the Manhattan branch of the State Excise Department at 1,451 Broadway. In 1912, when Job Hedges ran for Governor, Krulewitch was the Republican candidate for Secretary of State.

RISE OF $26,840,412 IN 1918 CITY BUDGET

Net Increase, Exclusive of a Direct State Tax Levy of $8,463,756, Is $18,376,656.

Large Advance in Personal Service and for Teachers' Retirement System.

Figures for the tentative city budget for 1918 made public yesterday show a big increase over the budget of 1917. The total for the entire city, including provision for the direct State tax, is $237,054,549.57, an increase of $26,840,412.75. The budget of 1917, with no direct State tax, was $211,114,136.82. The direct State tax for 1918 amounts to $8,463,756.38, which gives a net increase over the 1917 budget of $18,376,656.15. Of this amount $5,940,566.15 is for personal service.

The largest increase is for debt service, which in the tentative figures is put at $75,590,460 as against $69,744,568 for 1917. On the other hand the appropriation for tax deficiency shows a new decrease of $1,900,000. The figures for all five Borough Presidents' offices show increases as follows: Manhattan, $208,925; Bronx, $67,909; Brooklyn, $190,627; Queens, $150,855; Richmond, $75,832. The total for New York City, exclusive of the county governments, is $222,206,068.49, against $203,807,819.59 last year and the increase in the personal service account for the city is $5,925,088.88.

The second largest item of increase is for the teachers' retirement system, which accounts for $2,674,839 of the total increase and for the Department of Street Cleaning, $1,419,714. The figures for the Police Department show an increase of $962,804 over 1917, while the Fire Department has an increase of $964,298, and the Water Department an increase of $922,000.

Under a new legislative enactment the tentative budget figures must be published by Oct. 10. After Oct. 20 it will be impossible to increase the amount, but it may be decreased. While some changes will be made it is expected that they will change the total only slightly. The tentative figures would mean an increased tax rate of about twenty points. It was explained that the increases for all city departments was due to the increased cost of material and supplies and the general increase in the cost living.

The increase for the Charities Department is $963,788, while the Department of Health estimate for the coming years shows an increase of $354,354. The increase for the Department of Correction is $307,200, and the Dock Department has asked for an increase of $446,811. The increase for the Finance Department is $24,155, while the Law Department, which includes the offices of the Corporation Counsel, shows an increase of $34,515.

Public hearings on the tentative budget will be held by the Board o Estimate on Oct. 15 and 16. Taxpayer hearings on proposed decreases will b held on Oct. 24 and 25. The final budget must be signed by midnight Oct.

To the Mayoralty Candidates

Irrespective of Their Political Affiliations

The term for which the Mayor is elected is four years, sufficiently long enough for him, with able men and women, to effectively put in operation a real constructive program for social preparedness and welfare, so that the City of New York may make itself the greatest in the world, not only as it is now in area, numbers and wealth, but by eliminating poverty, protecting its needy diseased, giving its future citizens—the children—the best of education, physical training and recreation, and affording every man and woman an equally good opportunity—which we maintain is our duty to do, and which was intended by the Constitution of the United States.

We maintain the following, and ask you to answer each and every question with an immediate, straightforward answer—YES or NO.

No. 1. We maintain that our glorious flag has unselfishly, in the noblest spirit of humanitarianism, unfurled its banner to fight and obtain democracy for the whole world, including the German people, and that it is the duty of every one, including the conscientious objector, to solidly support this cause.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 2. We maintain that since we are sending our boys to France it would be criminal not to give them the best possible weapons, and that the quicker we do it the quicker the world will be at peace.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 3. We maintain, as we always have, that every citizen must protect his flag, but that the flag must protect every soldier and sailor and his dependents, both during and after the war, not as a matter of philanthropy or charity, but as a matter of justice. The Soldier Insurance Bill will take care of matters in this direction, but there will be much left for the city to do.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 4. We maintain that a paltry pension is not sufficient recompense or just pay for a man who recognizes his sense of responsibility, or for a mother or wife who is giving her dearest, and we must all work to see to it that future pensions shall be equivalent at least to the cost of living.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 5. We maintain that the best way to effectively carry out the principles of the sincere pacifist is by quickly and unitedly pushing our military plans.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 6. We maintain that no real welfare will ever be accomplished without woman suffrage, and that woman must be allowed to take her permanent place alongside of man and be the governing power in matters educational, in matters relating to sex problems, and in the building of ethical character.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 7. We maintain that we must have speedy and effective supervision of all public utilities and without disrupting the present system work toward municipal ownership of such utilities.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 8. We maintain that it is criminal to take a first offender and throw him into a pen with habitual criminals, and we maintain that if he be proven guilty he should be sent to a corrective institution where he will be given kind discipline minus punishment.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 9. We maintain that all convicts should be put at steady work in order to produce, and to receive a wage therefor, one-third of which shall go to the support of the convict's dependents, who are not responsible for his crime; one-third to be kept by the State for the betterment of the social structure, and the balance to be placed to the credit of the convict until his discharge, so that when he is released he will face the world with some means and not be compelled to go back to a life of crime, the only way now open to him to obtain a living.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 10. We maintain that we must have a National Department of Welfare with a Cabinet Officer, that every State shall have a similar department, and that every municipality shall have a similar department, all the departments to be closely interwoven, with an advisory board of men and women who shall have charge of all matters pertaining to charity, philanthropy, and unemployment—in short, to look after the welfare of all the people and recommend legislation from a non-partisan standpoint, thus doing away entirely with the charity system.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 11. We maintain that no one shall be dependent upon the philanthropic humor of any body, and that this department shall see to it that every needy diseased is cared for, not only from a sentimental standpoint, but also from a selfish standpoint of protection for the healthy ones; that every one who seeks employment and is unable to find it through no fault of his own, shall be given employment with a just wage, and that this department shall recommend sufficient public improvements to accomplish this.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 12. We maintain that every child must be given school room on full time; that every child must be given sufficient playground; that the school playground shall be open all year round, and that the school system shall be enlarged and completed so that every child will receive physical training and grow accustomed to both work and play, if need be, at the expense of culture and science; that it is criminal to attempt to educate children who are ill-fed, and that they shall be provided with good nourishment; that it is criminal to attempt to educate children who are diseased or mentally deficient, and that they shall be cared for; that every schoolhouse shall have a roof garden, where the parents can take their children in warm weather; that each school shall be thrown open in the evening to the citizens of the district and be used as a recreation and social centre so that the parents may grow to know one another.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 13. We maintain that the municipality shall, in addition to the concerts now given in the parks, give at least one concert a week in every public school (and we will undertake to furnish volunteer artists who will donate their services, if need be,) which will develop the aesthetic sense of the people, it will bring the artists before the public and encourage the development of real American music.

DO YOU AGREE?

No. 14. We maintain that a commission of intelligent men and women must be appointed to study and formulate a new taxation system, so that the wage earner will have to pay taxes only in proportion to his ability, and that no one shall be allowed to escape the payment of taxes; and that it shall be made a serious offense to escape the payment of taxes, since by so doing we are robbing the future manhood and womanhood of the country.

DO YOU AGREE?

We realize that these reforms cannot be accomplished in a day, and have no desire to suddenly revolutionize the present structure—but we maintain that military preparedness without social perparedness is a criminal waste of money. That by spending much now to eliminate the root of the evils we will effect great savings later on. By inaugurating this system we shall have less criminals, most crime being due to poverty; we shall have less diseased, most disease being due to poverty; we shall have less drunkenness, most drunkenness being due to poverty and lack of social centres; we shall have less prostitution, for most of it is due to poverty and lack of ethics and character.

REVIVIFIED GIANTS CAPTURE FIRST WORLD'S SERIES GAME ON THE HOME GROUNDS

BENTON BLANKS SOX IN THRILLING GAME

himself for a throw. He ran over to the base line and touched Weaver with the ball himself, while Schalk reached first.

Eddie Cicotte was up, and a dangerous batsman he is. Benton had the ball spinning like a top when it reached Bill Rariden's glove. Cicotte could not meet it at all and he struck out, just as Manager Rowland, coaching on first, sent Schalk down to steal second. Rariden, forced into the game because of Lew McCarty's injury, whipped the ball down to Herzog, and the fleet little White Sox catcher was caught in the jam of a double play.

Giants in Perilous Position.

The White Sox threatened again in the ninth, and this time the situation fairly bristled with possibilities. After John Collins and McMullin had succumbed at first Eddie Collins, by sheer speed, beat out a roller down the first-base line. That in itself doesn't look so alarming, but recollect, folks, General Joe Jackson, the same Shoeless Joe who once made the longest home run ever made on the Polo Grounds, was at the bat. If General Joe took it into his noodle at this moment to poke out a home run it doesn't require any great knowledge of mathematics to perceive that the score would be tied.

And don't you think that Rube Benton didn't realize this just as well as the White Sox. It was a tense moment. Just about this time, and the huge crowd sat up in their seats watching the mighty slugger, with pop eyes, as Benton unraveled his curves.

It was a moment of great concern on the White Sox bench. Here was their only chance. It was a slim one, to be sure, but stranger things have happened in baseball. Kid Gleason, Rowland's right hand on the board of strategy, was dancing up and down at third base, while Rowland, on the first-base coaching line, was telling Eddie Collins to be prepared to travel when Jackson smote the ball.

Benton took his own sweet time and the first ball he sent at Jackson was twisting so fast that when Joe swung hard enough to pole it over into Eighth Avenue the result was a measly foul. Again Jackson set himself for the desperate punch. Again Benton, cool and cautious, shot up a curve which tempted Jackson's most powerful effort. Joe brought his bat far back over his left shoulder and brought the club around viciously. The bat cracked against the ball and it shot high into short left field over near the foul line. Burns romped in for it and Fletcher backed over toward the falling sphere. Fletcher grabbed it close to the line, whirled about quickly, and raced toward the clubhouse with the souvenir. In half a minute the bleacher crowd had flowed out on the field and the players were swallowed up in a maelstrom of excited humanity. Fletcher wormed his way through the mob which was fighting to hammer him on the back, but he arrived safely at the clubhouse, still clutching the ball.

Crowd Is Well Behaved.

The rain on Tuesday and the two defeats the Giants had suffered in Chicago had its effect on the jamming and turmoil which usually marks world's series games here. There was none of the confusion which usually comes when thousands of impatient fans storm the gates. Yesterday the crowd took its time in going to Harlem, and there was no excuse in the world for any one getting his toes walked all over in the throng.

There was excitement, and plenty of it, before the game. The Giants looked livelier when they took their warming-up practice than they did in Chicago. Even Manager McGraw looked different. He showed his old aggressiveness and was all the time talking and advising his players. Shout after shout greeted the Giants as they went through their preliminary practice with their old-time spirit.

The spirit of the crowd was a bit different from the wild-eyed Chicago partisans who spent their whole time at the Chicago games jeering and making life miserable for Heine Zimmerman. When Eddie Cicotte had finished his first inning, the crowd back of the Chicago bench actually applauded him. Can you imagine in your wildest moments a Chicago crowd giving a reception to a Giant pitcher? Not in this generation.

Heinie Zimmerman was in his element. His whole following of ardent admirers from the Bronx, headed by Johnny Cook, took pains to see that their Heinie got half a dozen good cheers for every jeer that he got in Chicago. Heinie acted like a new man, and so did many of the other Giant players. They hopped around as if they were on springs and were never still a moment. They trotted back and forth from the field between innings, which was quite different from the snail pace they affected before the wild stockyard crowds in the Middle West. There was confidence in every move they made, and even when Eddie Cicotte went out to warm up before the game they seemed rather glad that they were going to have a chance to get back at the moundman who humiliated them in the Windy City.

Crowd Generally Fair.

As the game progressed, some of the New York fans couldn't restrain themselves from booing Cicotte, and the little booing which came forth a few times was only a murmur from a small crowd of pent-up baseball fanatics whose idea of good sportsmanship is jeering the loser when he is going down to defeat. For the most part, however, the crowd was fair and the Chicago players, as well as the Giants, were applauded for their good plays.

The band played tons of music and the song boosters earned their day's pay by howling popular ditties until they couldn't speak. Before the game Clark Griffith sent several ball players through the crowd and got a big basket full of money for the soldiers' ball and bat fund. Hank Gowdy and Nick Altrock were the most popular collectors. Gowdy, who left the Boston Braves flat in mid-season to become a soldier, was called to the plate before the game and was presented with a silk American flag and a wrist watch. Joe Farrell, the head of the Woodland Bards, the White Sox boosting organization, made the opening address, which no one but Joe himself heard. Admirers of Benny Kauff presented Benny with a fine walking stick, which Benny will take out for an airing every time he parades his two dozen suits of clothes on the boulevards.

Mayor Mitchel edged into the game by way of centre field completely surrounded by policemen. The Mayor threw out the first ball, but made a wild pitch. The infield and the territory around the home plate were crowded all the time by ball players and strangers, a custom which does not make much of a hit with Henry Fabian, the groundskeeper at the Polo Grounds. Henry is a landscape architect of no mean renown, and he took special pains to have the diamond dressed up in its Sunday best for this opening game of the world's series here.

Henry coaxed the grass to grow in pretty designs around the home plate and had the whole infield as smooth as a billiard table. He didn't fancy the Woodland Bards of Chicago using it for a doormat, for there was no word "Welcome" on it for them. Anyway, they wear heavy shoes.

Just as soon as Theodore Shonts of the Interborough had taken his seat in a box directly behind the catcher, the game was all ready to start. This was not because Mr. Shonts had entered at this moment, but because it was almost 2 o'clock. Mr. Shonts gazed around at the populace with a look of satisfaction, and why not?—didn't he give everybody a ride up to the Polo Grounds in his nice, comfortable cars? Yes, he did—for a nickel a throw. Gee, what a lot of nickels that man must have.

Loud Greeting for Shano.

When John Collins, Shano they call him in Chicago, came up to the bat in the first inning the Woodland Bards greeted him with a considerable greet. Shano had been one of the White Sox heroes of the opening game in Chicago, and he is quite popular. His popularity got a bad thump, however, before the game was over, because Shano, playing left field, got his feet mixed up with his feet, his hands mixed up with his hands, and his eyes badly mixed up in the sun. Maybe Shano had a lot of pity on Benny Kauff, the Giant centre fielder, who hasn't made a hit in the series yet. Anyway, on two occasions, when Benny lofted the ball out in Collins's front yard in left field, Collins handled the ball as if it was a hot potato. In the first inning Benny hoisted one over his roof and Shano got under it, stretched out his lily white hands and the ball jumped out of them like a grasshopper, while Benny got down as far as second base.

Again there seemed to be collusion between Benny and Shano in the third inning. Benny couldn't hit Cicotte safely, and his effort resulted in another rocket to Shano. This time Collins, the pride of Chicago, again spilled the ball all over Henry Fabian's green turf. If Shano expects to last through the series perhaps he better put a little glue on his glove.

George Burns brought forth a volley of groans from the stands in the second inning when, with two Giants straddling the bases, he fanned. Twice in the first three innings Fletcher had a chance to drive in some runs with a hit, but there wasn't a hit in Fletcher's kit. Nary a hit.

The Fourth Becomes Joyous.

And then came the joyous fourth. Cicotte wasn't afraid of Robertson, and if Robertson was afraid of Eddie in Chicago he wasn't in New York. When two objects face each other in a situation like this and are not afraid of each other, it is the one with the punch that wins. Robertson slapped Eddie's "shine ball" as it went flickering past him, and it was no love slap. He crashed his bat against the ball amidships, and it went tearing through the atmosphere to deep right field.

Jackson looked up, took one peak at it, and started to hot-foot it to the fence. The ball hit the fence in front of the bleachers as Joe came romping up. Joe slipped in the mud as he grabbed for the ball, and by the time he had it back to civilization Robbie, 'ole boy, was on third base, smiling the smile of the just. So that was Cicotte's "shine ball," was it? That was the old knuckle puzzler which the Giants couldn't hit in Chicago, was it? Well, Robbie solved its mysteries and it is now an open book. Umpire Klem looked over several of the balls which Cicotte pitched trying to see if he used any foreign substance on them. He looked over this one, but the only thing he found on it was one flat side, where Robbie had punched it.

Holke Adds a Double.

Next on the waiting list was Holke. His first swing at the "shine ball" was a strike. The next ball he lofted over into short left field, and old butterfingers John Collins hopped in for it, but just missed it by an eyelash. And while he was doing all this missing Robertson had crossed the platter with the Giants' first run, and Holke was talking it over with Eddie Collins at second base. That run set the match to the fuse, and the stands and bleachers let loose. They had something to howl about now, and howl they did. Sedate old men and their quiet looking women companions let convention go to the winds and jumped up and shouted with the others.

Manager McGraw, who was coaching at first base, gave a wig-wag to Bill Rariden as he went up to the bat, and soon after every one knew what the wig-wag meant. Rariden laid down a pretty sacrifice and Holke was on third. Out in deep right field Reb Russell and Danforth were warming up ready to come in to relieve the staggering Cicotte. Eddie glanced around and saw these boys getting ready to grab his job, so he got mad and struck out Rube Benton.

But Cicotte's wrath didn't have any effect on George Burns. George used to live in Utica, and in the big crowd somewhere were several of his old townsfolks who had come down to see George play. George's father was among them and he thought that this would be as good a time as any to show father what he could do. Burns spanked a slow roller to the infield along the third base line. Cicotte hurried over to field it, but he wasn't quick enough, and, anyway, the ball was a tantalizing little thing just out of everybody's reach. On this hit Holke scored with the other Giant run.

With the Giants safely on top Benton improved as he went along. His port side flinging had the White Sox up a tree and they went out with a regularity which brought forth loud exclamations of approval from the happy New York gathering. Most of the Sox couldn't solve Benton at all. Eddie Collins and Buck Weaver got two hits each and Felsch got the other.

With all the confidence which yesterday's victory brought to the Giants' camp, McGraw's men will go after the Sox again today with the firm intent of evening up the series. It is probable that McGraw may start Slim Sallee again, but there is a possibility also that he will send Ferdie Schupp in again, as the Giants' leader has great confidence that left-hand pitching will beat the Sox quicker than right-hand tossing. Reb Russell will probably be Rowland's choice of flingers, with a chance that he may use Faber again. Right after the game the two clubs and their followers will hurry back to Chicago to continue the feverish excitement.

ROYAL WELCOME FOR GIANTS.

Crowd Roars Out Its Confidence Long Before Game Begins.

Apparently every transgression which the Giants committed in Chicago was forgiven and forgotten in the minds of the 33,000 people whose deep throated applause volleyed across Brush stadium in welcoming the team back to the Polo Grounds for the first game of the world's series in this city. It was a crowd that came to be convinced that the idols of only a week ago were not entirely made of clay and every sparkling bit of play was greeted with loud approval which rose to a mighty shout of triumph as Arthur Fletcher, racing over into left field, pulled down Jackson's hit for the final out of the game.

It was a decorous gathering, this crowd that filled the big arena almost to the point of overflowing. Outside the gates the casual observer would hardly have realized during the hour or two before the game that a world's series battle was about to begin within. Only the cordon of police and the automobiles parked anywhere, everywhere along the side streets showed that something more than of ordinary consequence was taking place. The spectators did not come in a horde to storm the turnstiles.

Only about 14,000 seats were sold yesterday and the only rush was in accommodating the gathering of about 9,000 people who, not possessing the coveted pasteboards, came early to be sure of a place. Before long the park began to fill up and thereafter the crowd was steadily augmented by new arrivals until just before play began, when one had to use his eyes sharply to discover a vacant seat. There were a few, and strangely enough they were in the bleachers. This section of the seating space was not by any means crowded, although vacant places did not stand out glaringly.

Speculators Work on Trains.

On the elevated trains the speculators in possession of a fair assortment of rain checks and tickets plied their trade until the grounds were reached and then, retracing their journey, would board a following train. Seats were held at a high premium, but even at that there were ready purchasers. Hardly an elevated train was crowded as it rolled into the 155th Street station and the Eighth Avenue surface cars showed the same lack of congestion.

While there was leisure in the gathering of the crowd, some took matters a bit too unconcernedly and their reward was an outside berth for the game. A few of the most enthusiastic, some 300 or so, stayed outside the grounds during the playing of the contest and listened eagerly to every detail of the struggle that was forthcoming, and even without sight or accurate knowledge of the game matched cheers with those which rose from the stadium, knowing well that the volume of the cheering could mean nothing unless it was a favorable sign for the Giants. The only man who had a chance to see the game without paying was possessed of stilts and carried a sign, and even he was disappointed. Some few succeeded in reaching the roof of the elevated station and managed to catch a partial glimpse of the field. Some other daredevil ones ascended two steel towers, risking life and limb in the exuberance of their desire to see the Giants rehabilitate themselves in the race for the world's championship pennant. Back on Coogan's bluff there was gathered a crowd taking the game by proxy as the din of yelling rose past them.

Music may have charms to soothe the savage breast, but there are times when its influence is lost on a baseball gathering. The supply of this commodity was in excess of the demand, and many of the spectators, fretting because of the wait which they were called upon to face and feeling the craving for food, stormed the sandwich restaurant. The habit proved so satisfying that the section of the stand where Harry Stevens serves the Polo Grounds' guests was a popular centre until the very time that the ball players appeared.

Jim Thorpe First to Appear.

There was never a sign of a ball player until nearly 12 o'clock, and then Jim Thorpe, the renowned Indian athlete, who has worn a Giant uniform on and off for several seasons, made his way across the field. He received the greeting of a lifelong friend. It was not long before other Giants appeared all clad in the white home uniform which they have worn all season. The Giants had a superstition that new uniforms wouldn't be quite the thing.

Nick Altrock gave a bit of his comedy play before the game started while collecting funds for the bat and ball fund which is to supply the implements of baseball to the troops overseas. Hank Gowdy, as a full-fledged member of the regular army, assisted him. Gowdy later on became a more important figure when he was summoned out to be presented with a silk flag which contained some other kind of a present as well. Hank didn't take the fans into his confidence about that, but he looked pleased and smiled for the camera men. Benny Kauff, who has distinguished himself by not getting a hit in three games of the world's series, was presented with a gold-handled cane, but it was understood that a prerequisite to permanent possession was that he must make a hit in the series.

Fifteen minutes before the game started Mayor Mitchel, flanked by a cordon of police, came from the gate under the score board and walked across the field to his seat behind the New York dugout. The appearance of the Mayor was the signal for the first bit of concerted cheering that the crowd had done. He tossed out the first ball, and a second later had it back in his possession after Benton had made one toss across the plate.

It was plain that the crowd had no sympathy for the Sox. It was recalled that Zimmerman had been treated roughly by the Chicago fans, and Cicotte and Eddie Collins were singled out for booing and hooting. It was not quite so pronounced, however, as the game wore on, for the fourth inning gave the crowd visions of such a glorious victory that it was impossible to think of anything else.

Every fan was on tiptoe as Robertson crashed his triple to right field at the opening of New York's half of the fourth inning, and the shout that went up was one of mingled revenge and triumph. When Holke doubled a moment later the real climax of the game was reached for the first run had scored. It was a jubilant crowd thereafter. In the latter half of the eighth inning and at the start of the ninth the spectators began to drift away confident that the Giants with a two-run lead were invincible.

DETAILED ACCOUNT OF GAME BY INNINGS

ROBERTSON LEADS ATTACK

Davy Gets Triple, from Which He Scores Giants' First Tally, and Contributes Day's Fielding Gem.

Rube Benton was so supremely confident and exhibited such excellent control during his warming-up exercises that Manager McGraw never gave a second thought to his pitching selection. Manager Rowland elected to play his ace in an endeavor to all but settle the issue, but subsequent events proved that the Giants held the trump and the ace was in the discard.

Bill Klem, the veteran National League umpire, gave the decisions behind the plate; Silk O'Loughlin was at first base; Billy Evans at second base, and Charles Rigler at third. After Mayor Mitchel made an attempt at throwing a ball, the game started with a vengeance.

First Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Benton evidently did not care for the resin or other foreign matter plastered on the ball by Mayor Mitchel, since after the Mayor tossed the ball "somewhere in the infield," Rube got into position and pitched so wide of the plate that John Collins, the first Chicago batter, had to jump back to keep from being decapitated. Umpire Klem then stopped the game and presented the ball to Mayor Mitchel.

With confidence renewed and a new ball in his capacious left hand, Benton offered a wide curve to John Collins, who swung under the ball and fouled it to the backstop. Another wide curve came up, but it was too far away to encourage another swing. Shano hit under the next pitch and lifted it high in the air. It came down eventually and snuggled into William Rariden's welcoming hands. Benton breezed over a strike on McMullin, and had the second going that way, only McMullin foul-tipped it. At the third pitch McMullin tried to golf the ball, which was just above the ground, and was neatly retired on strikes. To the accompaniment of boos, Eddie Collins watched a wide one sail by, refused to offer at one over the plate, fouled off two in succession, waited placidly while Benton twirled two more wide, and, with the count three and two, dropped the next offering in centre field for the first single of the game. With two balls and one strike registered against him, Jackson bounded the ball to the left of Benton, who leaped in the air, clutched the sphere, and carefully tossed to Holke in time to retire Jackson. No runs, one hit, no errors.

GIANTS.—Burns received a hearty welcome from the huge gathering as he took his place at the bat against Cicotte. On the first pitched ball Burns brought the crowd to its feet by sending the ball almost to the left-field bleachers, but it fell foul. Cicotte offered one too low, which Burns ignored. He fouled off the next one, watched one sail by too far away, fouled off another, and then struck in vain at a low, breaking curve which just skimmed over the plate. Charles Herzog was greeted with cheers almost as loud as those for Burns, but could not respond since he heard a strike called, fouled off the ball, and then lifted a lofter to Felsch.

Grim determination was written on Benjamin Michael Kauff's face as he advanced to the plate, amid a scattering of applause. Benny was not up there to wait long, and it was the second ball he saw coming his way that he leaned against and sent flying up amid the clouds. By the time the ball answered the call of gravity and started back toward earth, John Collins, Happy Felsch, and Buck Weaver were crowded around the spot where it would light. John Collins offered to make the catch and the others moved away. John, however, only offered to make that catch, as the ball bounded out of his hands and Benny was safe at second. What a situation for the Great Heinie Zimmerman! His Bronx followers sent up a war cry which would have frightened the Kaiser himself if it did not awaken just a bit of fear in the heart of Cicotte. Zim fouled off the first one, watched a wide one go by, missed a vicious strike at a low offering, then dropped a puny roller along the third-base line, and arrived at first before Cicotte could field the ball. Benny excitedly and happily moved along to third, it being the furthest station he had occupied during the series. It was Zimmerman's first safe hit of the series, after eight failures. Fletcher had a fine opportunity, but his best effort was a foul which fell only inches outside the third-base line, and then he grounded out McMullin to Gandil. No runs, one hit, one error.

Second Inning.

WHITE SOX.—There was just a bit of fear exhibited by the Giants when Home Run Happy Felsch advanced to the plate, but it quickly turned to confidence when the hero of the first game watched a ball and strike pass by and then lifted a foul behind first base, which Holke easily gathered in. Such easy disposal of Felsch brought the fact home to Benton that he had a puzzle which the White Sox were going to have a hard time to unravel, so, when Gandil came along, Rube shoved the ball across the plate and was further convinced when Gandil also lifted a foul to Holke. Rube tested Weaver's eye with a ball wide of the plate, and then tried to sneak one over, but Weaver shot it on a line to the outfield for a single. Benton paid too much attention to keeping Weaver close to first base and threw two pitches wide of the plate, neither of which got even a sign of recognition from Ray Schalk. Benton had to put the next one over, and Weaver was well enough aware of this fact to start on a pilfer of second as Benton raised his arm to pitch. Rariden made a quick return peg to Fletcher, who got the ball in plenty of time to put it against Weaver, but, in doing so, Fletcher dropped the ball and Umpire Evans had to reverse his decision to safe, after calling Weaver out. Benton threw another wide one to Schalk and the little catcher, with the count 3 and 1, leaned against the next one, which went on a line toward left field. It appeared to be a certain hit on which Weaver would score, but George Burns galloped into the picture with his usual grace and caught the ball just as it was about to fall on safe territory. No runs, one hit, one error.

GIANTS.—Davy Robertson, who was the offensive star of the day and the player who broke the heart of Cicotte, waited not for a look of Cicotte's mystery ball, but slashed into the first offering and shoved it past Eddie Collins so fast Eddie hardly had time to say how-do-you-do to it, much less get better acquainted. With Robertson on first through his single, Holke also tried banging the first ball pitched, but was hardly as successful, since his bounder settled into Eddie Collins's hands and Robertson was forced out on the line, but too late for Eddie to try for a double play. Rariden was patient enough to get the count 3 and 1 before he took his bat from his shoulder. The taking was even more effective as he settled against the ball, just as Holke was starting to steal second, and singled to centre. Holke never even hesitated at second, but continued to third rapidly enough to land there easily. Benton lifted the first ball pitched just behind second base, into the hands of Felsch, and Holke only made a bluff to go home, but the bluff was good enough to draw a throw from Felsch and allow Rariden to go to second. With men on second and third and a single needed, Burns decided to wait for one to his liking. He saw two strikes speed over the plate, but outwardly was no more concerned than when the next one was wide. Burns fouled off the fourth pitched ball and waited while another curve broke away from the plate. He decided the next one was the right one, but he was mightily mis-guessed, since Cicotte threw the ball much too low to be hit and Burns struck in vain. It was his second demise on strikes in succession and two Giants were left roosting a lap or two from home. No runs, two hits, no errors.

Third Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Cicotte tried hard to hit a ball three feet wide of the plate and managed to raise the next one into the air. It came down in Rariden's hands on foul territory for an out. John Collins saw two wide ones drift by and fouled one off, before he lifted another high foul just outside first base. Holke got under the skyscraper, but was attacked with a bad case of butterfingers and dropped the ball, which cost him an error. Holke's error cost nothing, however, since Shano bounded the ball to Zimmerman, and the Great Heinie blithely tossed it to Holke for the put-out. McMullin gave the fans a chance to scramble for a ball with a foul and then raised another high foul which Rariden caught. It was the fifth pop-up on foul territory in the first three innings and proved even more conclusively the effectiveness of Benton. No runs, no hits, no errors.

GIANTS.—As Herzog was batting in this inning, the Sox bench warmers became too personal in their remarks anent the Giant Captain, and were warned to desist by his majesty, Willyum Klem. Herzog, too, resented the remarks, especially after he swung frantically at a ball high and close to his chin, and walked back to the bench, Cicotte's third strikeout victim. Encouraged by his two-base error smash of the first inning Benjamin Michael pounced upon the first ball pitched by Cicotte and gave it a long ride toward the left centre field fence. John Collins again essayed to make the catch, after a fifty-yard sprint, but once more the ball bounded out of his hands and Benny was credited with a second two-base error smash. Here it might be mentioned that two world's series records were written indelibly in history. Kauff was the first man who ever got two two-base errors in one game and John Collins was the first outfielder who ever dropped two flies in one contest.

Zimmerman picked out the first offering to send a grounder to Weaver who elected to put out Zimmerman at first and allowed Kauff to again reach third. Benny wanted to cross the plate and looked at Fletcher beseechingly but after Fletcher had failed to make good on an attempted squeeze play, he grounded out, via Eddie Collins and Gandil. No runs, no hits, one error.

Fourth Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Eddie Collins tested the mettle of Heine Zimmerman to start this frame with a slashing roller toward third. Zim stepped into the ball recklessly, stopped it, and picked it up in time to throw out the speedy Chicago Captain at first base. Benton went to work on Jackson with an assortment of wide-breaking curves, the first of which crossed the plate, the second bent to far outside, and the third started across the plate only to be met by Jackson's bat. The ball bounded over Benton's head and appeared to be on a long journey to the outfield, when it suddenly was confronted by Fletcher, who clutched it and threw to Holke ahead of the swift-moving Jackson. Benton experimented with Felsch, offering the Home Run Chicagoan a slow ball, and Benton quickly was sorry he had tried anything out of the ordinary, as the slow ball was converted into a sizzling single into left field by the unfeeling Felsch.

Gandil came within an ace of breaking up the pastime, but Davy Robertson added the fielding gem of the afternoon to his hitting spree to make certain he was to be the hero of the game. Gandil met the first ball offered by Benton and raised it on a looping journey toward the right field grand stand. Robertson ran as he never hustled before, and got to the ball just in time to pick it off the concrete wall, retiring Gandil. Davy bumped into the wall hard enough to knock over anything but reinforced concrete, but he held onto the ball and saved the day. No runs, one hit, no errors.

GIANTS.—Robertson was cheered to the echo as he advanced to the plate and was probably inspired thereby, but he gave no immediate notice of his power when he swung vainly at the first ball Cicotte offered. However, the power was latent since the next Cicotte offering was lifted to the far right field confines of the park and, before Joe Jackson could race that distance, pick up the ball and throw it back to Eddie Collins, Robertson was sitting on third base and 33,000 fans were yelling with supreme delight. Holke foul-tipped a ball, which caused a conference of Manager Rowland, Cicotte, and Schalk. Evidently Cicotte won the argument, since he shot the next one straight for the plate. But this time Holke straightened it out for a line hit to left field, which scored Robertson. John Collins again gave every indication of a man-up-a-tree, trying to field Holke's smash, and it went by him, Holke getting credit for a double. Rariden had orders to bunt, and bunt he did, advancing Holke to third with a sacrifice handled by Cicotte.

Benton had a chance to win his own game, and he tried, but three times he swung and thrice he missed the ball. It was up to Burns to help Holke home and Burns had struck out twice. Cicotte pitched as if relieved. Burns foul-tipped the first offering and promptly asked Umpire Klem to take a look at the ball, evidently suggesting that Cicotte had used his mysterious influence. Klem examined the speroid and found something wrong, since he threw the ball out of the game and tossed a new one to Cicotte. Cicotte then threw three straight balls, and on the next one Burns only tipped it, but it fell along the third-base line in a place impossible to field in time to put out Burns at first. Cicotte fielded the ball and made a foolish and vain effort to get Burns, but the ball went over Gandil's head and Holke scored with the second and last run of the game. Burns got to second on the overthrow, being credited with a hit and Cicotte with an error. Herzog lifted a high foul near the right field wall, which Gandil caught with one outstretched, gloved hand for the third out. Two runs, three hits, one error.

Fifth Inning.

WHITE SOX.—With two runs to work on, Benton speeded up his pitching. He put over two called strikes on Weaver, then two wide ones, and saw Weaver dribble the next to Fletcher for an out to Holke. Schalk had a strike called, swung at one that hit the dirt near the plate, and struck at another low one and had to be thrown out at first. Cicotte watched two strikes speed by and missed the third one, giving Benton two strike-outs for the inning. No runs, no hits, no errors.

GIANTS.—The Giants relaxed somewhat under their lead and Kauff had to be satisfied with a high foul to Schalk. Zimmerman stepped into the first ball offered him and sent it on a long, high flight to the remote parts of the outfield, but it did not go far enough for Felsch not to get under it and catch it. Fletcher looked at a wide one, fouled the next into the left field stands for the fans to scramble for, and then foolishly struck at one wide of the plate and another too low to be worth while, which brought Cicotte's strike out victims to five. No runs, no hits, no errors

Sixth Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Benton continued in his glory in this session. John Collins started amid the hoots of the multitude, which evidently was censoring the unfortunate outfielder for his mistakes. He apparently was worried over them himself, since his easy grounder to Fletcher resulted in as easy an out. McMullin fouled off two and watched two wide ones go harmlessly by, before he shot the ball back at Benton with even greater speed than Benton had offered it. However, Benton already had been introduced to the ball, and it was no stranger to him. He picked it up fondly and tossed it to Holke ahead of McMullin. Eddie Collins endeared himself to the left field grand stand fans by fouling the ball into that section before making his exit on a grounder to Holke. Collins and Holke had a race for the bag, but Eddie was a distant second. No runs, no hits, no errors.

GIANTS.—Robertson responded to greater cheers than ever, but this time his meeting of the first pitched ball resulted in a towering fly to Felsch. Holke tried to bunt, fouled off one, and missed connections on his third swing. Rariden called Umpire Klem's attention to a ball slightly discolored and Klem threw that one out of the game. Cicotte handled the new one as well, for Rariden was out on a bounder to Eddie Collins. Cicotte pitched only five balls in this inning. No runs, no hits, no errors.

Seventh Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Herzog got his first fielding chance of the game on Jackson's bounder in this session and the result was the demise of Jackson via Holke. Felsch worked Benton into a three and two condition only to have Benton hook a wide curve over the plate which left Felsch a strike-out victim. Benton made Gandil jump back from the plate with a wild offering, then Gandil sent a nice little bounder to Zimmerman and Zim and Holke accomplished the downfall of Gandil. It was the third straight inning that not a hit had been made nor a man got to first against Benton. No runs, no hits, no errors.

GIANTS.—Benton did not want any one to get the impression that he was a hitter since he swung at a wild pitch, foul-tipped a second, and threw his bat at a third, which was four feet wide of the plate. Burns waited patiently until Cicotte had thrown three balls and two strikes before George bounded one to Weaver and was tossed out to Gandil. On the first pitched ball to Herzog, the Giant Captain registered his second hit of the series with a looping, puny fly, which dropped just beyond the reach of the infielders. Then came Benny Kauff on his twelfth trip to the plate during the series and still hitless. It was Benny's last chance of the third game and he needed a hit. He watched a wide one go by, fouled one just as wide, and was left despondent and hitless when he lifted a high fly to Felsch. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Eighth Inning.

WHITE SOX.—What appeared to be the only "break" for Chicago came at the start of this inning, when Weaver opened with a short fly ball to deep short field. Fletcher ran out and Burns came in, but Fletcher elected to take the chance. He barely got to the ball, and was unable to hold it. Weaver rounded first and slid into second in time to get credit for a double. Burns could have caught the ball, but he stopped when Fletcher called out. With this opening Schalk pounced on the second ball, but it bounded into Benton's hands and Weaver was caught between second and third. Weaver stood in his tracks and waved for Schalk to hustle for second, but Benton hustled faster and tagged out Weaver before Schalk could more than round first. This broke up Chicago's rally and left it more comfortable for Benton and the Giants. Cicotte managed to get the count 3 and 2, but missed the third strike, and Schalk was doubled trying to steal second, Herzog taking Rariden's perfect throw and tagging his man. No runs, one hit, no errors.

GIANTS.—Zimmerman made a desperate bid for a second safe hit, after missing a strike, with a line drive, but the ball headed directly for Eddie Collins, and Collins held it. John Collins got a chance to prove he could catch a ball when Fletcher sent a liner to left. Most of the crowd expected to see Shano drop the ball, but he held it. Robertson still had a lot of fight left in him and almost took both Cicotte's feet along to the outfield with his drive for his third hit of the game. Cicotte wasted three deliveries pitching out to Holke, expecting Robertson to steal. Then Cicotte put the ball over and Robbie did steal. It availed him nothing, however, as Holke was called out on strikes, Cicotte's eighth victim of the game. No runs, one hit, no errors.

Ninth Inning.

WHITE SOX.—Rariden pounced upon John Collins's roller, which dropped in front of the plate, and threw Shano out at first. With the count 3 and 1 on him, McMullin tried to step into one of Benton's deliveries, but his effort resulted in a snaky grasser to Fletcher, which was converted into an out, via Holke. Eddie Collins refused to acknowledge defeat even at this stage, but dumped the first ball pitched along the first-base line and sprinted fast enough to beat it to first for a single. Joe Jackson looked at the spot in the far right corner of the grand stand where he made his Polo Grounds record drive several years ago, and aimed in that direction, but even at this stage Benton was the master, for Jackson's pop foul fly was gathered in by Fletcher just behind third base and the game was over.

REDS CAPTURE OHIO TITLE.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 10.—The Cincinnati Nationals won the sixth and deciding game of the series for the Ohio State major league title from the Cleveland Americans here today. The score was 8 to 1.

Jim Bagby made his third attempt to come back in the series, but was knocked out in the third inning, being replaced by Coumbe. Eller, pitching for Cincinnati, was very effective.

Cincinnati scored 4 in the third, 3 in the fourth, and 1 in the seventh. Cleveland's only run was made in the seventh on a triple by Speaker and a single by Smith.

Ban Johnson a Volunteer.

Ban B. Johnson, President of the American League and member of the National Baseball Commission, stated today that he had volunteered for military service in France. He said he had offered his services to the Government, but in what capacity he declined to say, explaining that the offer had not been definitely accepted.

COLUMBIA BEATS M. T. HIGH.

The Columbia 'Varsity played a short scrimmage game against the Manual Training High School eleven yesterday, and in some twenty minutes' work put the ball across the goal line twice. On the kick-off Howard Miller, the star quarterback of two seasons ago, rushed the ball back from Columbia's twenty-yard line to Manual's ten-yard mark, knocking off or dodging almost the entire team of high-school boys.

On the first play the visiting boys stopped the Columbia back, who was carrying the ball five yards behind the scrimmage line. But from then on the Morningside players held the whip-hand, Shaw going over for one score, and Canapary, substituted for Shaw, skirted around the Manual flank for a second touchdown.

The line-up:

Columbia, (10.)	Position.	Manual T., (0.)
Cochran	R.E.	Seitz
Farrell	R.T.	Warren
Dormstadter	R.G.	Ward
Galvin	C.	Putnam
Kindleberger	L.G.	Snyder
Farer	L.T.	Logan
Kennedy	L.E.	Latimer
Miller	Q.B.	Laehy
Shaw	L.H.	Kamien
Houlihan	R.H.	Leiken
Rosen	F.B.	Lang

Before the 'Varsity-Manual scrimmage the second eleven from the Training School gave the freshmen team a chance to show its defensive. Coach Tom Thorpe supervised the workout of the freshmen and sent many a man out of practice to watch how the other man did it. Considering how few men have shown up for the yearling team Coach Metcalfe is quite discouraged with the present outlook.

Canapary, who scored for the 'Varsity in yesterday's scrimmage, and Memmit, half back of the second team, have been ruled by the Faculty to be ineligible for the 1921 team.

Harte, Forsyth, Korn, De Fronzo, Campbell, and Laskey are expected to recover from the injuries they received and report for practice by the end of this week.

YALE'S FOOTBALL PLANS.

Freshman Eleven Will Play Harvard and Princeton.

NEW HAVEN, Oct. 10.—The uncertainty which has hung over Yale football was dispelled today with the definite announcement that freshman games would be arranged with Harvard and Princeton. A joint meeting of the Board of Athletic Control, college and Sheffield School councils and the athletic association, it is announced, has authorized Professor Robert N. Corwin, the Chairman, to arrange for the games, with the restriction that "only men enrolled in military or naval training be allowed to represent Yale."

It was also decided that class elevens should be organized and a series of interclass games played, beginning next Saturday.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Oct. 10.—Seven members of last year's Princeton freshman team, strengthened by two 'Varsity men and three former Rutgers stars, lined up against Foster Sanford's Rutgers team this afternoon for a full forty-minute game. For three periods neither side was able to score, but in the last period Rutgers forced the ball over the line by a series of line bucks and mass formations.

Bob Nash, former All-American tackle, donned a suit for the first time this year and played against his former team-mates. He shared with Robeson, the big Rutgers tackle, the honors of the afternoon. Whitehill, Baker, Kelly, and Gardner started in the back field for Rutgers, but the latter two were replaced by Gargan and Lawes. The scrimmage this afternoon was the best workout the team has had this year and was preparatory to the game with Syracuse on Saturday.

We owe the gentleman who dictated the following a million thanks!

New York City.

Dear Sir:—

While riding in the subway this morning, I overheard one gentleman say to another:

"Pardon me if I ask you a question. I am a stranger in New York and would like to know of a good men's furnishing house." The other answered: "Rogers Peet is very reliable." The first man remarked, "I don't want to get fooled, you know," and the reply was, "You won't; these people are very trustworthy; get out here." It was 33d St. station, but the doors were closing before he could get off, whereat he was told to go to 14th St. station and the 13th St. Store of Rogers Peet.

It seems to me a reputation like this is better than advertising space, and I thought you would like to know about this quite unique incident.

FURNISHES THE VITAL SPARK

Davy Firmly Established as New York's Favorite Son in the Hearts of the Baseball Fans.

By IRVIN S. COBB.

It is very cramping to one's style to go forth all prepared to write a piece about a funeral, only to discover the funeral turning into a combination of a silver wedding, Old Home Week, and Mardi Gras. Those who went to the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon prepared to help screw down the lid came back at eventide organized to open many bottles. If there is any efficacy in having one's health drunk with copiousness by others, Mr. Davy Robertson of Mr. John J. McGraw's team ought to live long enough to tell his great-grandchildren how he spilled the estimable beans for Mr. Comiskey's boys from Chicago and brought home the middlin' meat for the group of sterling young athletes of which he, at the moment of going to press with these lines, is the favorite son.

I figure the sharps, experts, all to their very hair roots, are going to have various explanations to account for the upsetting of proud Chicago's hopes—and prospects—of making a clean sweep of the World's Series. Some, no doubt, will attribute the Giants' sudden endowment with the vital spark to the fact that they were playing in their own ball yard with their own friends and well-wishers to the number of thirty-three thousand or thereabouts behind them and around them, but especially behind them, sending forth waves of moral support warm enough and sincere enough to be felt and almost to be seen. Some perhaps may declare the main contributing factor to have been the prime brand of pitching offered for the consideration of the White Sox by Mr. Rube Benton, whose chief claim to distinction in his own particular field of endeavor up until now has been that once he was let go by Cincinnati, almost certain proof that he had something in him. Others, I opine, will decide that the failure of the stockyards' favorites to make it three straight might conceivably be due to the influence of the local atmosphere upon the beryl and opal tints of Mr. Cicotte's justly famous shine-ball, which appears to thrive best where the air contains much besides just air. These diagnosticians are likely to hail from Chicago, where they like their ozone to be full of foreign suspended matter.

J. Collins as a Juggler.

Others, believers in the occult, may think to discern a benign psychic influence operating in behalf of the Giants, because they laid aside the lacrymose gray housings that they wore in Chicago and came forth today in white uniforms, flecked here and there—as was the casket furnished by the small town undertaker for the burlesque lady's funeral—with flacks of heliotrope. If you don't know the story about the burlesque lady's coffin, ask any veteran traveling man. Yet others will say that the result might have been different and that nightfall descending upon Coogan's Bluff might have seen the two teams fighting out a tie had it not been for the clabbored performances of Mr. J. Collins, left fielder for the pets of the abattoir district. After seeing Mr. J. Collins juggling flies this afternoon many present were at a loss to understand how this gentleman ever succeeded in catching the train for New York. They finally decided that he didn't catch it at all—that Happy Felsch or somebody caught it first, and relayed it to him, and that all he got credit for in the railroad conductor's summary was an assist. In passing, it should be stated that while bearing the same name, Mr. J. Collins is no kin to Mr. E. Collins, also of the White Sox. They may have been related before today, but not any more, except over Mr. E. Collins's dead body. One does not claim relationship with one who has come between one and one's immediate prospect of hauling down a winner's share of all this chunk of money that is being piled up in our two largest cities. One does not call one cousin who has done such a thing to one. One is much more apt to call him things which would not look pretty spelled out in plain print in a family newspaper. Blood may be thicker than water, but it butters no parsnips.

A Psychological Catch.

For all I know to the contrary, each separate expert, while agreeing with his fellows as to the great outstanding point—namely, two to nothing—may offer his own separate explanation for what was either a dire catastrophe or a consummation most devoutly to be wished for, depending on whether one's point of view is that of Broadway and Forty-second, or that of State and Randolph. But, as for me, speaking up in my humble way from my quiet corner in the inglenook, I venture to assert that the principal underlying reason was psychological rather than physical, and, furthermore, that the person directly and individually responsible for the thing was this same young Mr. Robertson, previously referred to.

It was at the end of the fourth inning, when neither side had scored, when Chicago was at bat, with two out and Mr. Chick Gandil was up—yes up, and doing. Mr. Benton put one over and Mr. Gandil fell upon it and knocked it a mile, some observers say two miles. Going away from here it looked like a two-bagger. It looked like a three-bagger, indeed, for the nonce; as Nick Altrock would say, it looked like a home run. At the very last it changed its mind about being a home run, and decided not to go over the grandstand fence after all, but to drop just alongside the breastworks and be a three-bagger. At this point Mr. Robertson intervened. He projected his vivd personality across the soggy greensward at a speed scarce to be appraised by the human eye, and, with one shoulder brushing in its flight the mural concrete, he reached forth his greedy hands and he ——.

Exit Cold Feet.

For three years the world has been wondering what force it was, what mysterious agency, what suddenly summoned influence, which turned the Germans back at the Marne when Paris was almost in their grip. I think I know now. I think Papa Joffre must have done a Davy Robertson—in other words, must have achieved the unachievable. Anyhow, that was what Davy did all by himself alone out there in right field. He just naturally snatched victory down out of the sky. And then, right on top of that, he came up to bat and slammed out the three-bagger which, with some assistance from Mr. Holke in the nature of a double, drove the retreating enemy clear to the Aisne.

Before that moment the Giants, to my way of thinking, had been nervous and uncertain; had played with the desperation of men already licked but determined to die game rather than with the dash which is sired by confidence. Chilled fingers may have caused some of the fumbling committed by them in the opening stages, but cold feet affected them temperamentally. But from the moment that Robertson caught that ball of Gandil's and then made his long hit his teammates played a different kind of baseball. Psychology did it, and we can prove it!

For once a New York audience showed local pride. Local pride is a fine thing, but there may be too much of a fine thing, just as there may be too little of it. Chicago's sense of local pride may be slightly overdone on occasion, as, for instance, when thirty-odd thousand Chicagoans unite in booing a ball player named Benny Kauff because, through stage fright, he is not playing up to his best form. In New York usually it is overdone to a point where it becomes quite rare. But on this day and date there was a real fervor behind the cheering. It was a real enthusiasm which inspired thousands to ruin their throats and hundreds to hurl their hats in the air with a total disregard for expense every time a Giant did something creditable.

A Fever of Presentations.

Those who foregathered at the Polo Grounds yesterday afternoon got their money's worth out of the game and more than their money's worth out the the preliminary scenes and pastimes. Twenty-two newspaper photographers—I took the trouble to count them myself—scurried about like so many red ants on a hot stove, taking snapshots of nearly everybody who was anybody in the Who's Ballyhoo of sportdom and stagedom and societydom. On behalf of parties to deponent unknown, but said to be from Hartford, Conn., a gentleman of impressive mien presented Benny Kauff with a gold-headed cane, and inspired by this a number of persons straightway started a fund to present Mr. Faber of the White Sox with an ivory-headed cane in commemoration of his having on last Sunday stolen third from Buck Weaver, who happened to have it at the time. On top of this Hank Gowdy, late of the Boston Braves, who is wearing the khaki of a high private in the volunteer army, was presented with a wrist watch, making the seventh wrist watch that has been given to him since he enlisted. Hank is now said to wear wrist watches all over his person, so that any time he wakes up he can tell what time it is without turning over, or anything. The presentation ceremonies wound up when a group of Chicago rooters sitting just back of third base and acting in accordance with a quaint tribal custom of Cook County, gave Heinie Zimmerman a box of raspberries.

High Caterer Harry Stevens, who invented food conservation before Hoover ever dreamed of such a thing, had a field day. The celebrated Harry Stevens ham sandwich, which may be eaten by strict Catholic on Friday or by an orthodox Talmudist on any day in the week without violation of the religious principles, sold by its tens of thousands.

Just before the game started, Mayor Mitchel made an inconspicuous entrance by marching clear across the field from the far side to his box accompanied by about as many policemen as the Mayor of Chicago would take with him on an outing of real Americans, or as the Mayor of Philadelphia would take with him to an election booth in a municipal primary.

From the standpoint of a writer who strives to be impartial, but who loves his cozy flat in Harlem, there was but one fly in the ointment. Regardless of what may happen today, the circumstance of the New York team having won yesterday necessitates another trip to Chicago on the part of one who intends to see this series out to its end.

N. Y. U. HAS LONG PRACTICE.

Ex-Captain Bernstein Comes Back to Help in Coaching.

The New York University football team practiced outdoors yesterday for the first time this week, in one of the longest drills of the season. In the early afternoon there was a long period of signal practice, followed by an equally long scrimmage. At first the 'Varsity tried several new plays against the scrubs. Next Coach Wall lined the scrubs against the 'Varsity. The regulars took the ball at the start, but soon lost it on a fumble, that team tendency which showed itself in the R. P. I. game and persisted throughout yesterday's scrimmage. When the regulars recovered the ball in scrub territory Egan undertook a line plunge at the middle of the field and succeeded in threading his way through the scrub tacklers to the 10-yard line. On the next play the ball was carried over the line.

FEATURE RACE WON BY ST. CHARLCOTE

Edward M. Weld's St. Charlcote, a chestnut son of St. Savin, became the equine hero of one of the best races ever seen over a long course when he stretched his neck in front of the Greentree Stable's Cherry Malotte and captured the Subscription Handicap, which was the feature of the concluding program of the Piping Rock Association. All through the three miles Jockey Smoot had been vainly striving to restrain the impetuosity of his mount, but St. Charlcote was rank and more than willing to make the pace, while the three other starters were rated behind him.

When Cherry Malotte took the lead entering the home stretch the situation looked hopeless for St. Charlcote, but he was game as well as ambitious, and dashing ahead on his courage he resumed the lead after clearing the last fence, and retained his speed until he had passed the judges.

The race was one to warm the blood of the cross-country enthusiasts who braved the chilly wind to cheer their own horses or those of their friends on to victory. The attendance was not up to that of the opening day, but every one present was a sportsman or sportswoman and took the greatest interest in the performances of the few thoroughbreds that provided the afternoon's sport. The woods surrounding the course had assumed full Autumnal garb, and the turf was in such excellent condition that few mishaps occurred at the extremely difficult fences.

Mr. Weld selected St. Charlcote to carry his colors instead of the champion Weldship, and this left Cherry Malotte the top weight. There was only six pounds difference in the allotments for this pair, and both were asked to concede a lot of weight to W. R. Coe's Bet and the Northwood Stable's Northwood. St. Charlcote closed a slight favorite over Cherry Malotte, with Bet the third choice.

Three turns of the course were necessary to complete the three miles, and in the first lap Smoot did his best to hold his mount back. For a quarter of a mile he was strong enough, then St. Charlcote insisted on going to the front and Smoot let him have his way. Cherry Malotte was easier to place, and Powers kept her speed in reserve as he completed the first turn of the course in last place and about eight lengths behind the leader.

St. Charlcote steadied down a little in the next lap and by careful handling Smoot managed to place him behind Northwood as they passed the judges for the second time. Cherry Malotte had moved up into third place at this time and was moving freely. The real race commenced soon after passing the club house, and all along the back stretch St. Charlcote was hustling at a pace that kept the others busy to follow. Henderson began his run with Bet approaching the far turn and rushed up into second place.

They were running in this order on coming down the hill leading to the home stretch, and it was here that Vincent Powers made a move with Cherry Malotte that saved ground. He shot on the inside of Bet, and before Smoot was alive to the situation had taken the lead as he skimmed the corner on the jump entering the home stretch.

Powers was riding his hardest and Cherry Malotte responded so that with only two fances to clear she had a lead of a length and a half. Smoot on St. Charlcote was tired from his early efforts, but his mount was undaunted and in the run to the next fence closed gradually on Cherry Malotte so that the crowd was cheering both horses as they rose at the last obstacle with the mare slightly in the lead.

St. Charlcote jumped quicker and further than his rival, and on landing was on even terms. It was a great drive to the finish, but Cherry Malotte was at the end of her spurt, while St. Charlcote was fresh and tireless as he passed the judges a neck to the good. Bet was only three lengths back and was two lengths in front of Northwood. The summaries:

FORDHAM IN WORKOUT.

The Fordham players were sent through a hard workout yesterday for the Norwich game, which will be played on Fordham Field on Saturday. The punting and signal drills were followed by a clash between the 'Varsity and scrub elevens. The first team was put on the offensive all afternoon, although the backs were frequently forced to buck the 'Varsity line when the forwards were interchanged.

The linemen did not display any too much aggressiveness yesterday, and Coach McCaffery was not slow in informing the players of this fact. A long drill on the defense for the forward pass plays was held with all of the backs hurling and the ends and backs receiving the leather. McGrath and Fitzpatrick returned to the lineup and went through the scrimmage, but Erwig and Crowley were unable to do any rough work.

Custom-built Broughams
For Immediate Delivery

For several months past two of America's foremost body builders have been developing these cars especially for our metropolitan patronage. It will be the exception if you fail to find one among them which measures up to your ideal in every detail. No two of them are alike. Each has as much individuality as if it were the only one commissioned to be built.

And their interiors are marvels of taste and refinement. Not only do they carry out the color scheme dictated by the body paint but the quality of the fabrics employed insures long and satisfactory wear. In some gunmetal hardware is employed, in others plain or embossed silver. All windows are adjustable. Such essentials as dome lights, step lights, auxiliary folding seats, vanity boxes and phone for directing the driver are, of course, provided.

BERNSTORFF'S AMERICAN ARMY.

Canada was at war with Germany in 1916; the United States was not; yet the two are bracketed together as enemies, to be attacked in essentially the same way, in the orders sent by Berlin to Count von Bernstorff and now made public by Secretary Lansing. Bernstorff, nominally an Ambassador from a friendly country, was actually the secret Commander in Chief of Germany's forces in the United States for carrying on war against the country which harbored him and against Canada. "Sabotage in the United States and Canada," his instructions read, though Germany was not nominally at war with us, only with Canada. He was instructed as to the minor differences in his secret war on both countries; in the United States, unlike Canada, embankments and bridges must not be attacked, for instance.

When the President, because Germany was making war upon us as truly as on any of its admitted enemies, asked Congress to recognize the fact and declare that war existed, he said that > it has filled our unsuspecting communities, and even our offices of government, with spies and set criminal intrigues everywhere afoot against our national unity of council, our peace within and without, our industries, and our commerce.

It did more than raise up violence against us; it undertook to direct our politics, to shape our policies. Nothing is clearer from Mr. Lansing's successive revelations than that the "pacifist" agitations and the pretended agitations for "Irish freedom" were created, organized, and directed from Berlin; that Congress was influenced by this enemy influence, doubtless believing all the time that these agitations were honest and spontaneous. In the Lansing exposure of Sept. 20 there was made public Count von Bernstorff's request for authorization to pay $50,000 "in order, as on former occasions, to influence Congress "through the organization you know "of." Yesterday's exposure gives the clue to one of the "former occasions":

> The Embargo Conference, in regard to whose earlier fruitful co-operation Dr. Hale can give information, is just about to enter upon a vigorous campaign to secure a majority in both houses of Congress favorable to Germany and requests further support.

This was sent Sept. 15, 1916. It was on Jan. 22, 1917, that Bernstorff wanted to spend another $50,000 "as on former occasions." Yet the message of Sept. 15, 1916, was not the beginning; it refers to the Embargo Conference's "earlier fruitful co-operation" with this secret enemy of its country, and referred Berlin for further particulars to Dr. William Bayard Hale, the Berlin correspondent of The New York American. The Berlin General Staff warns Bernstorff that he must keep out of sight his own connection with "Irish pro-German propaganda." The pretended Irish movement and the pretended anti-embargo movement were alike controlled by von Bernstorff, the Commander in Chief of Germany's campaign against "Canada and the United States." Sir Roger Casement, supposed to be a visionary, an idealist, carried away by love of country, now appears plotting not for Ireland and against England, but for Germany and against America. What conceivable interest had Ireland in making war upon the United States? Yet Casement is found informing the General Staff how it can get information about "persons suitable for carrying on sabotage in the United States," among others, from Jeremiah O'Leary.

The time has now definitely come to cease treating these so-called pacifist movements as being misguided but sincere. With each new revelation of their origin by the State Department, are we to pretend that we have neither eyes to see nor brains to reason? Are we, each time, to be horrified at the exposure of the particular knot of pretended pacifists who are dragged to the light as conspirators, and yet give those as yet unexposed a clean bill of health? Is it not certain that if Germany created and organized and financed one gang of conspirators masquerading as pacifists, who have been exposed, she would not hesitate to create and organize and finance the others, who have not yet been exposed?

The time has come, too, to withhold the tolerance that has been accorded to those Senators and Representatives who allow themselves to be wheedled or terrorized by these bought and paid for agitations. A man is presumed to intend the consequences of his acts, and Secretary Lansing's disclosures have clearly pointed out those consequences. In January, 1916, the month in which the General Staff was sending these orders to Bernstorff, Senator Gore was proposing not merely an embargo, but actually a law forbidding American ships from carrying both passengers and munitions. This, doubtless, was one of the fruits of the "earlier fruitful co-operation" between the General Staff and the Embargo Conference; and within a few weeks Congress was forced by the President to a vote on the Gore and McLemore resolutions, which strangled their power for harm, and which, we can now see, was forced by the President for the purpose of baffling the plot which he knew to have been created by Bernstorff.

In the light of these revelations we can look back and see plainly enough that Gore was a mere tool for Bernstorff, who was in his turn the mere instrument of the crafty and malignant enemy at Berlin, making deadly war upon us in the guise of peace. We trust Gore was an honest tool, merely deceived and duped, but a tool he was. But what is the good of learning that lesson about the past if it teaches us nothing about the present? Let Senator La Follette or Senator Gronna be never so honest, never so deceived, they are as truly the tools of German conspiracy in 1917 as Gore and McLemore were in 1916. If they are honest dupes, if they really mean well by their country, they can show it by realizing, in the face of this staggering revelation, that they are mere pawns in the hands of secret and powerful forces, and retreating from their position at once. For the object of the German conspiracy is nothing less than the defeat of our armies, and it is to this end that it is using these men and all the others like them. So far as that dreadful consequence is concerned, it matters not one whit whether the tools know they are tools and like it or whether they are mere dupes and victims of their own feebleness of understanding and thick darkness of mind.

LIBERTY LOAN PROSPECTS.

Pessimism is the obvious policy of those who will be responsible for the Liberty Loan until it is all taken. If they were to say they were sure it would be oversubscribed, they would lose one of their arguments with slow or reluctant takers. It is necessary to record that there are such, and in places which ought to resent the fact. The Filipinos took more than their pro rata of the first loan, and the Slovaks are now taking more than the proportionate share of those to the manner born. There are even Americans who are not subscribing for the sake of liberty and democracy as well as are the Germans for the support of the submarines. The promoters of the Liberty Loan are quoting to us the figures of French subscriptions to encourage us who are richer to do as well. The sneers of the Germans and the scorn of our allies may yet redden our cheeks unless we mend our ways.

But there are other things which might as well be said for encouragement. Treasury certificates receivable for payment of all Treasury dues, including subscriptions to the loan, have already been oversubscribed to the amount of 40 per cent. of the loan. Including the offering just announced, more than half of the loan will have been spent, and will be represented by these certificates, which can be paid over without the least disturbance of either the money or credit markets. Thus there is removed from the closing days of the subscription two dangers, one that the loan may not be subscribed, and the other that the taking of the loan may produce some disturbance of conditions. The security against that undesirable result is increased by the growing list of adhesions to the Federal Reserve system by local trust companies. Including the three just admitted, the system is strengthened by $1,600,000,000 of banking resources. The Federal system's footings in this district have just passed a billion dollars for a day's business for the first time. With about one-half of the trust company resources in the Federal system, it is only a question of time when the others must follow. There are strong institutions which still hold aloof, and whose policy might be argumentatively sustained in normal times. But times are not normal. Mutual support is necessary in proportion as there may be any necessity that the banks of this district should take any remnant of the Liberty Loan. Everybody knows both that this is undesirable but that it is sure if it is necessary. Nobody thinks that the Liberty Loan will not be taken. There is, however, some idea that the loan may not be taken in the manner most desirable, that is to say, by oversubscription in every Federal district by ten or twenty million takers. There would be 25,000,000 subscribers if foreign precedents were to rule. There is no hope of that. It is an open question whether the merits of the Liberty Loan are appreciated among the millions who must replace the taxed rich. Thus our sense and our patriotism are both on trial. Those who think that Americans are both sensible and patriotic are those who are surest that the loan will all be taken in due season.

REGISTER TONIGHT.

The registration for the first two days of 1917 was only a little more than half of the registration for the first two days of 1913. In the latter year, to be sure, the public mind was profoundly interested in the municipal election. That was the main, almost the sole interest. Now, we are told, the war engrosses men's thoughts. The voters of New York have not yet waked up to the imperious duty that must be done this week. Yet it is a doubly patriotic duty that they are neglecting.

In 1913 a Fusion Administration was but a hope. For nearly four years now it has been an achievement. It has achieved the destruction of organized vice, the recreation of the Police Department, the diminution of crime, the diminution of fire risks, furnished better protection of life against fire, clean streets, better tenement house conditions, civilized management of the parks, restriction to residence use, by the zoning resolution of 1916, of the streets about the little parks, development of port, dock, and terminal facilities, modernization of the water supply, a new subway system nearly completed, honest and strong finance; in short, the advance of public health, safety, convenience, the general welfare, energetic, honest, nonpartisan administration in every department of the municipal government.

There is a far greater reason to vote for Mr. Mitchel and his colleagues on the Fusion ticket in 1917 than there was in 1913. They have given the city more than they promised, more than was hoped. Do you want that kind of City Government? Are you going to support it? Then register tonight. Don't put it off till a more convenient season. Do it tonight, between 5:30 and 10:30. No registration, no vote. Not your benevolent velleities and good opinion, but your vote will aid good government.

And is it absorption in the war that keeps you away from the registration boards? Not a bit of it. If you are absorbed, if you are even interested in the war, if you want the United States to win, if you want this city with all its enormous power and resources to be at the service of the nation, if you want the city to be free, in war, from every taint of Copperhead suspicion, register tonight so that you may vote to sustain a patriotic City Government and the United States, which can be greatly helped or injured here.

ECUADOR AND ARGENTINA.

Dr. Perl, appointed German Minister to Peru and Ecuador, made himself agreeable to the Government of the latter last Spring by sending his credentials by mail. The Latin-American sense of dignity, of correctness, and good taste was offended by this brusque German proceeding. The Government of Ecuador declined to recognize this presentation by Post Office. The double Envoy then sought to acquire recognition by the dispatch to Quito of a legation employé as Chargé d'Affaires. Of course the Ecuadorian Minister of Foreign Affairs could not recognize the underling of an unrecognizable Minister by mail. Now the great man himself, no longer busy in Lima, is willing to climb to Quito. No, says the Minister of Foreign Affairs.

In the present aspects of the relations or breaking off of relations between the Ibero-American republics and Germany Ecuador's action can hardly be interpreted as an objection to receive a Minister who has justly offended her dignity by his gaucherie. Rather does it seem that Germany is non grata, that Ecuador has taken her place in the alignment of Ibero-America against Germany, the twelfth anti-German Ibero-American State.

If Ecuador is rigid on a minor point of honor, Argentina appears to be surprisingly long-suffering, patient, full of charity, even to the extent of digesting intolerable affronts. Mr. Pueyrredon, her Minister of Foreign Affairs, is unmoved by the example of Uruguay, or moved in a contrary direction, since territorial controversies exist between the two States. "Relations with Germany," a Buenos Aires dispatch quotes him as saying, "will be "broken if sufficient cause arises, but "as long as Germany recognizes the "Argentine flag and respects the na-"tion and the people there probably "will be no break." These sentiments are likely to breed somewhat impatient comment among the Argentinians, a people of spirit, with no love of swallowing insult. What, then, is "sufficient cause"? Possibly Germany has left unsunk, spurlos or otherwise, no vessels in European waters under the Argentine flag. Possibly, the German genius being so different from that of the rest of the world, Germany shows her respect for a nation by sinking its ships, by breaking promises, by making no sign of disapproval when a German Minister tells the German Foreign Office that the Minister of Foreign Affairs of the country to which he is accredited is "a notorious ass," by counseling the murder of sailors and citizens of that country. Mr. Pueyrredon and President Irigoyen are forgiving and tolerant men.

Meanwhile the offending von Luxburg is said to be lurking, concealed, in Argentine territory. Doubtless the forbearance of the Government is capable of intelligible explanation in Buenos Aires. Elsewhere it is hard to understand.

TAMMANY AND GERMANY.

The Tammany candidate for President of the Borough of the Bronx is Mr. Henry Bruckner. Who is Mr. Henry Bruckner, and why was he nominated for President of the Bronx? He has been the Representative of the Twenty-second New York District in the Sixty-third, Sixty-fourth, and Sixty-fifth Congresses. His one leap into fame, the one act but for which his service at Washington would now be as faint to the common memory as his service in the New York Legislature sixteen years ago, was done on March 4, 1916.

On that day the resolution which keeps in American minds recollection of the gifted and patriotic Lone Star statesman, the Hon. Jeff: McLemore, came to a vote. That declaration of dishonor brings back vividly a national shame, the attempt to set the United States crawling at the feet of Germany, to give up the clear rights of Americans upon the sea.

Mr. Henry Bruckner voted against the tabling of that resolution. He voted for that cowardly surrender, he, one of the Representatives in Congress of the City of New York. Why have the Tammany mandarins picked out Henry Bruckner as their man for President of the Bronx? Why are they eager to give a vote in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment to him who voted against the United States, abased himself, and sought to abase his country before imperial Germany? There is but one answer, the more positive because it fits in with the circumstances of the Hylan nomination. Tammany wanted Mr. Bruckner as bait for the pro-German, anti-American, and seditionary vote. Judge Hylan, reading painfully and obediently the speeches fed to him by his masters, dares not disown that associate on the ticket.

Is the surrender to Germany approved by Mr. Bruckner at Washington to be approved by the City of New York? Hylan, Bruckner, Hoch!

THE WAITING DUTCH SHIPS.

One Dutch company has accepted the conditions imposed by our Government concerning the use of its ships. This may indicate that an agreement as to all of the eighty-four Dutch ocean carriers lying idle at our Atlantic ports is near at hand. The Nederland company was told that coal would be withheld from its ships unless it should consent to make a voyage with a cargo exclusively in the interest of this country and Canada for every one in its ordinary trade service with Java. Dispatches from Holland say that it has yielded. Our Government's restraint of the Nieuw Amsterdam, a ten-thousand-ton carrier of the Holland-America Line, should convince owners of the waiting ships that they must unload their cargoes. Although all the foodstuffs on board are consigned to the Belgian Relief Commission, licenses for coal and cargo will be withheld unless the company and the Dutch Government promise to send her back promptly to New York. Our Exports Board must know where the foodstuffs go and insists that the ship shall remain under its jurisdiction. Probably in this case the conditions will be accepted.

There will be no exports of wheat or fodder to the northern European neutrals. And our Government intends to find work for the waiting ships. They are needed in our coastwise trade, from which many of our own vessels have been withdrawn, or will soon be taken, for transatlantic service. They are wanted also on the Pacific. There should be an amicable agreement about the use of them. The alternative will be seizure, which our Government desires to avoid.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Two Views of the Same Encounters. To hasty readers it may seem that an issue of veracity is raised by the differences between the official reports on military operations along the western front, coming from Berlin on the one side and from London and Paris on the other. Really, however, the variance is only that to be expected when armies successful and advancing and those unsuccessful and retreating describe the same happenings. Now, as always, the full story is given out by the victors, while the vanquished do what they can to make the best of a bad case.

As told by the French or the British, a certain attack on the German lines is presented as the attainment of the designed objective, and therefore a brilliant achievement, and calculations of the enemy's losses are added as an essential feature. Of the losses by the assailants little is apt to be said unless they were notably small. The Germans prefer, naturally enough, to speak of such an attack as "repulsed" or "stopped," and that is the truth from the standpoint of those who choose to consider an attack on themselves a success only when it breaks through the whole line of defense. They have a sort of right to take that view, and it is quite certain that, with the situation reversed, their foes would do the same thing. Indeed, they often did it during their retreat from Mons.

Actual surrender apart, it is only the motion of the respective armies that reveals to those distant from the scene of operations how the tide of war is really going. The maps tell an indubitable story—a story that hardly needs the confirmation, though it profits from the emphasizing, given by such facts as the one with respect to the capture of cannon that received comment in this column last week. The German communiqués are intentionally deceptive, and yet the statements made in them usually have been fairly true of late. They illustrate the legal principle embodied in the form of oath which demands of a witness not only the truth, but the whole truth. The Germans have not yet suffered a conclusive defeat, but they have confessed grudgingly and between the lines of their reports to a long and constant series of defeats that are small only in the sense that they are not final.

They Want All and Too Much. In asking the Public Service Commission to measure gas by thermal rather than by illuminating units the gas companies make a request that might long ago have been granted to the advantage of consumers as well as of producers. Ever since "mantles" came into general use the introduction into gas of the substances that render it available as a direct source of light has been a detriment rather than a merit, from every point of view, and has increased cost with no better result than that of decreasing the power and shortening the "life" of the refractory earths out of which as essential elements the mantles are made.

The mantles give light because they are heated to incandescence, and it is a waste to heat them with a gas which is itself an illuminant as well as a raiser of temperature. Only a few users of gas, nowadays, demand anything from gas except heating capacity, and those few are under no necessity to do so. On the contrary, they all would serve their own interests, when they wanted light from gas, if they got it indirectly instead of directly.

But the gas companies burden their sensible and commendable plea for the adoption of the new standard of measurement with a demand that all of the profit incidental to the change go to themselves. Until they are willing to share that profit with the consumer they are likely to plead in vain, and they should.

A PEACE WITH VICTORY.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Advocates of compromise with Germany—those who hark back to President Wilson's phrase, "peace without victory"—forget that peace at this time would be peace with victory—German victory. It is the cheap and profitable wars of the past that have won over the German people to Prussianism. The war against Denmark gave to Prussia the provinces of Schleswig-Holstein and valuable littoral on the Baltic as a basis for naval development. Prussia waited two years and then fell on Austria, wresting from her, in a war which lasted but a few weeks, the hegemony of Germany. She then waited four years and attacked France, losing in that war an insignificant number of men, while securing an enormous money indemnity, unifying Germany, giving great filip to the national spirit and starting the country on a career of marvelous prosperity.

These are facts which we have got to face. Experience of one kind having set Germany's face in one direction, only experience of another kind is likely to cause her to "'bout face" and move in the opposite direction. Will Germany have had that experience if we make peace now while she is in possession of vast enemy territory? Will the military party be discredited unless she is driven out of all conquered territory, and unless, in her defeat, she is made to pay heavy indemnities, including loss of territory? The motive for such a policy would be, not revenge, but the spirit that informs the criminal law—prevention. For only then will the German people realize that Prussianism can bring disaster—awful disaster—as well as profit; only then will they see the folly of the present mad adventure. No such idea as that easy terms of peace will make for future good relations with the enemy should be allowed to interfere with our purpose. At the close of an ordinary war a policy of conciliation might—nay, would—have its advantages. But in the case of an enemy whose conscious policy of aggression is so plainly revealed in history and written in seas of human misery today, an enemy out for plunder and out for blood—our blood—as a means to plunder, such a policy would be childish.

THEODORE MARBURG

Before Columbus.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

As the celebration of Columbus Day approaches, it is well to remember that the first white man known to have actually placed his foot on the North American Continent was the Norseman, Leif Ericsson, who planted his flag on what we call today the shores of New England, about 1000 A. D. It is essential at this great hour in our national history that due recognition should be given to such an important fact.

Without wishing to detract from the achievements, through his many discoveries, of the Italian navigator, our continent was really discovered by the Norse people, and we are Anglo-Saxon and not Latin.

New York, Oct. 10, 1917. JUSTICE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The tobacco trade as one man indorses the plea for a six or a seven cent coin. The retail tobacco trade will become demoralized if the Government doesn't come to its rescue in the matter of coinage.

H. M. KONWISER.
New York, Oct. 1, 1917.

TO BELGIUM: THREE YEARS CAPTIVE.

("The Black Douglas opened the casket and . . . flung the heart of the Bruce forward into the paynim ranks, shouting: 'Lead, brave heart, as thou wert ever wont to do.' With a mighty cry, his soldiers rallied and surged forward to regain it."—Scottish Legend.)

Not dead, like that great heart of old,
But living, torn from flesh that bleeds,
Unransomed yet, thy captors hold
Thee, victim of their faithless creeds.
With all save hope and honor gone,
Beat on, brave heart, beat on, beat on!

Beat on! The tide of battle turns,
And, midst the Teuton cohorts hurled,
The heart of stolen Belgium burns
To guide the armies of the world.
Where France's oriflamme has gone,

From soldier throats goes up the cry,—
"Lead, like the brave dead heart of Bruce!
Fight on! A people shall not die,
While right is wronged we make no
truce,
Till, in the Judgment of the Lord

VANDERLIP URGES GREATER ECONOMY

MUST HAVE BANKS' AID

Speaking to thirty men, prominent in banking and business circles, at a luncheon tendered to him at India House yesterday, Frank A. Vanderlip, President of the National City Bank, but for the time being detached for service in Washington, strongly urged the need for greater co-ordination among the Allies and the imperative necessity for greater economy in the United States. Mr. Vanderlip said that with the $300,000,000 of Treasury certificates just announced by Secretary McAdoo the Government must get $900,000,000 from the banks this month in anticipation of proceeds from the second Liberty Loan and similar huge advances next month.

F. A. Delano, a member of the Federal Reserve Board, preceded Mr. Vanderlip with a brief speech in which he said that blows which the United States can strike in the next few weeks will be much more effective than heavier assaults later on. "We should pound the enemy as hard and as quick as we can," he said.

Mr. Vanderlip said that his going to Washington was no heroic thing. He said that his mail lately had been filled with offers from bankers and business men holding important positions who were willing to give up their private interests to serve the Government in any way. "It is a red-blooded nation," said Mr. Vanderlip. "I believe that our entrance into the war will eventually prove to have been the deciding factor in bringing victory to the Allies."

"I want to say that in the Treasury Department we have today a machine of wonderful efficiency," said Mr. Vanderlip. "There is real administration of affairs in the Department, a splendid working organization which has not been wrecked by changing Administrations. The Treasury Department faces the most difficult problem the Government ever had to face. The size of the problems is appalling and the task of preparation for war gigantic. Until recently no one had totaled figures of our contemplated expenditures. Congress has appropriated more than $21,000,000,000 for war.

"The best estimate of what will be needed to pay bills and supplying needed loans to our Allies makes the amount $19,000,000,000 to the end of next June. The figures with which we are dealing today are staggering. When you recall that until we entered the war the largest loan ever floated here was one for $500,000,000 for Great Britain and France, you will get a better picture of what it means to raise $900,000,000 to be used before the end of this month.

"We must have marketed $14,000,000,000 in bonds by the end of next June, supposing that we raise $4,000,000,000 more through taxes. We can place these loans if every bank in the country does its share. I think that some of the contemplated expenditures can be reduced, where estimates are made too far ahead. So far, however, no perspective of our financial situation has been attempted. We need a co-ordinated war policy. There has been some co-ordination already among the Allies, but in general each nation is following its own lines as the United States is. It may be that the war will be shortened if all of our efforts are centred on the Italian front or on some other point."

"We are going to discover that our investing power is greater than we suspected, even today," continued Mr. Vanderlip. "But, at the same time, the lesson of economy must be gotten over. We talk economy, but we do not practice it. We must prepare for a great expansion of credits which can take place safely on our present gold base. Our problem is serious, and it must engage the best minds, but it can be solved. You may rest assured that it is in good hands."

R. B. Fosdick Tells Mayor's Committee of Need of Women Officers.

Women protective officers to look after the welfare of the girls of the city and see that they are not led into danger by their interest in soldiers and uniforms was one of the subjects on which reports were given at the meeting of the Mayor's Committee of Women on National Defense in the Mayor's reception room yesterday afternoon.

The committee has two women doing this work—one in New York and another in Brooklyn. Two more are to be appointed, but the women feel that this is an important work that should be taken over by the city. Commissioner Woods has said that he would favor this if the demand were made by all the social organizations of the city. The work is under the subcommittee for the protection of girls of the Committee of Social Welfare of the Mayor's Committee, of which Mrs. Mary Simkhovitch is Chairman.

The women are to have a hearing, in which they will ask for an appropriation, before the Board of Estimate and Apportionment in the board's rooms on next Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

A statement concerning the need of the women officers from Raymond B. Fosdick, Commissioner on Training Camp Activities, was read.

Mr. Fosdick said that when the women were called policemen and put in uniform with guns and clubs they became little men and were guyed, but when they did their work as women it was of great service.

"New York City is one of the largest cities which have no officially appointed women protective officers," said Mr. Fosdick. "It is not only the centre of a group of large camps, but it is a point through which thousands of troops will be passing en route to other points. For this reason it seems to me that the necessity for protective officers in New York is doubly important, and I hope every step will be taken by local officials to secure an adequate number. There should be at least a dozen."

Mrs. Sara C. Douglass, the Manhattan Protective Officer, said: "Many of the soldiers and sailors have expressed their appreciation of our work when they understood it, and said it was as much for their benefit as for the girls."

LINKS BOLO WITH TURKEY.

PARIS, Tuesday, Oct. 9., (Delayed.)—A deposition taken today from Aviation Captain Maurice Dutreil, member of the Chamber of Deputies, who asked to be heard concerning the Bolo Pacha case, dealt with Bolo's connection with the negotiation of a Turkish loan in 1913, according to an official note issued tonight.

Leon Daudet, who has charged former Minister of the Interior Malvy with having had connections with Germany, appealed to Senator Henry Berenger to testify for him. The Senator's testimony was heard by Captain Bouchardon of the Military Court this afternoon.

Denial that Bolo Pacha posed as the Armenian representative at a congress of delegates of oppressed people held in Paris a month before the war started, was made here yesterday by Arshag Mahdesian, editor of the New Armenian.

A similarity in names, he said, led to the report that Bolo was at the congress. His statement was drawn forth by the assertion made by Daniel Blumenthal, President of the World League for the Restoration of Alsace-Lorraine, that Bolo won his way into the confidence of the delegates, posing as the Armenian representative.

"The Armenian delegate was Boghos Pacha, or Boghos Nubar, as he is more generally known," Mr. Mahdesian said. "He is the son of a former Egyptian Premier and is well known throughout Europe. Any one posing in his place would have been instantly recognized."

PICKS MEN FOR JUDGES.

Citizens Union Reports on Qualifications for Municipal Court.

The Citizens Union made public yesterday its indorsements of candidates for vacancies in the Municipal Court in Manhattan and the Bronx to be filled at the coming election. Candidates are recommended for fourteen of the sixteen vacancies in the two boroughs. The action of the union is based upon the recommendations of its city-wide Committee on Local Candidates. The indorsements are as follows:

Manhattan.

SECOND DISTRICT.

GUSTAV HARTMAN, (Rep.)—Judge Hartman served creditably in the Legislature for two years prior to his entry upon judicial duties. He early developed a public spirit, and has been a useful citizen as well as a good Judge.

FOURTH DISTRICT.

(Two vacancies.)

MICHAEL F. BLAKE, (Dem.)—Judge Blake has been a life-long resident of his district, is referred to by members of the bar as a fair-minded Judge, and deserves re-election.

JOHN N. BOYLE, (Rep.)—Mr. Boyle has had a legal training, which should make him a valuable addition to this particular court.

FIFTH DISTRICT.

FREDERICK SPIEGELBERG, (Rep.)—Judge Spiegelberg has been referred to as the "Dean of the Municipal Court." His decisions show patient research and judicial learning. He is undoubtedly worthy of elevation to a higher court. His re-election should be assured.

WILLIAM YOUNG, (Rep.)—Judge Young did effective work in the Legislature before he became a Judge. He is entitled to re-election on his record in the office he now holds.

SIXTH DISTRICT.

JACOB MARKS, (Dem.)—Judge Marks was a conspicuous member of the State Senate in 1905 and 1906. He displayed independence and ability and was an outspoken opponent of vicious legislation. On the bench he has adhered to the same high principles.

SEVENTH DISTRICT.

JOHN R. DAVIES, (Rep.)—Judge Davies attracted public attention as an Alderman some twelve years ago. As Chairman of the board's Finance Committee he was credited with instituting some of the earlier reforms in the handling of the city's finances. His court work has been widely commended.

PHILIP J. SINNOTT, (Rep.)—Judge Sinnott has served with credit to himself and to the satisfaction of litigants. He should be continued in office.

SIDNEY C. CRANE, (Rep.)—Mr. Crane's candidacy appeals to all who know him. He is a man of sound learning and fine instincts. His work in the Legislature and Board of Aldermen has been of the highest quality.

NINTH DISTRICT.

George L. Genung, (Rep.)
William C. Wilson, (Rep.)
Frank J. Coleman, Jr., (Rep.)

Judge Genung was appointed to this court after experience in the city's Law Department and as secretary to Supreme Court Judges. We find him well qualified for the office.

Judge Wilson, in his practice and in his former connection with the State Controller's office, gained a knowledge of financial matters which has helped to make his work in this court of value.

Mr. Coleman is an attorney of ability. He has had experience in the District Attorney's office and as legal secretary to Supreme Court Judges. He is apparently well qualified for the office.

Bronx.

FIRST DISTRICT.

PETER A. SHEIL, (Dem.)—Judge Sheil has served creditably and should be retained in office.

SECOND DISTRICT.

MICHAEL J. SCANLAN, (Dem.)—Judge Scanlan was appointed to this court last year by the Mayor, and the selection was approved by the voters at the ensuing election. He is a fine type of citizen and has filled this office well. His election for a full term is justified.

In submitting its recommendations the committee said:

"The litigation in this court and the decisions arising therefrom directly affect the industrial and commercial life of the city. The incumbency for the next ten years of nearly half the places on this bench will be determined at the coming election. In making our recomendations we have been guided by the principle that a good Judge becomes more valuable to the community with each year of service."

REFUSES TO GIVE UP COCCHI

ROME, Tuesday, Oct. 9.—After long consideration the Italian Government has decided not to grant the extradition of Alfredo Cocchi, who killed Ruth Cruger in New York. The Government expresses regret that it is unable to meet the wishes of the American authorities.

Emmanuel Fino, a lawyer, who has been acting as representative of the New York District Attorney, is endeavoring to arrange the sending of Cocchi to the United States under arrest to give testimony in regard to his reported associations with members of the New York Police Department.

Alfredo Cocchi murdered Ruth Cruger, 18 years old, a student at Wadleigh High School, when she went into his bicycle shop last February to have skates sharpened. He buried her body in his cellar, and for six months, until Mrs. Grace Humiston succeeded in having the cellar dug up, the police of New York were baffled as to what had happened to the girl.

Cocchi fled to his old home, Bologna, Italy, where he was arrested last Summer. He confessed the crime, asking only that he be not forced to return here to face the electric chair. The New York police were accused of inefficiency in permitting Cocchi to escape from the country. A Grand Jury investigation was ordered by Governor Whitman to determine if there was any more serious charge to be brought against any one in the department.

Detective Joseph W. Grigg went to Rome to work with the American Embassy in an effort to have the murderer sent back. As was pointed out by Judge Zucconi in Bologna last Summer, however, one of the fundamentals of the Italian penal code is a statute which forbids the extradition of Italian citizens charged with crime committed in other countries.

Cocchi may be tried in Italy and punished under Italian law. In Italy murde ris punishable by imprisonment of tyenty years to life.

BOOK PAPER MAKERS YIELD.

Abolish Bureau and Ask Dismissal of Price-Fixing Charges.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Twenty-three book paper manufacturers, answering today the Federal Trade Commission's complaint that through their Bureau of Statistics they had enhanced paper prices unduly, announced that the Bureau had been discontinued and asked for a dismissal of charges against them. The Commission will render a decision Oct. 29.

The defendants were cited to appear to show cause why they should not cease alleged unfair practices. They made no admission of charges of concerted action to raise prices and asked dismissal of the complaint solely on the ground that the instrumentality through which the unfair practices were alleged to have been carried out had gone out of existence.

WILSON CRITIC ARRESTED.

St. Louis Man Held for Disparaging Remark About President at Theatre.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 10.—A Federal warrant was issued today for the arrest of Henry B. Krenning, who until recently was President of an automobile manufacturing company, charging him with violation of the espionage act because of remarks he is said to have made last night at a theatre.

Krenning's arrest was caused by George W. See, who said that when President Wilson's picture was thrown on the screen Krenning made a disparaging remark about the Chief Executive.

ECONOMIC POLICY OF WILSON UPHELD

FOR A MERCHANT MARINE

Seek in International Trade Only Such Gains as the Nation is Entitled To After the Conflict.

The American Manufacturers' Export Association, at its eighth annual convention, held at the Biltmore Hotel, yesterday went on record as commending President Wilson's stand against economic leagues after the war, as well as against punitive damages and dismemberment of empires. The association also praised the establishment of a great American merchant marine; asked for a more liberal policy of the National Government toward export trade development; urged the establishment of an international court which would enforce its decrees by bringing about economic pressure on recalcitrant nations, and declared that the exporters of the United States wanted no advantage from America's victory in the war other than those merit entitled them to. It also pledged support to the Liberty Loan.

The sentiment of the convention, attended by 700 representatives of every line of export business, was expressed in the following resolution:

"The export manufacturers of the United States seek in international trade only such gains as this country is economically entitled to, and have neither desire nor design to profit by conditions created by the European conflict. The export manufacturers of the United States do not favor the principle of retaliation at the close of the war on account of the obstacles which may be found in the way of the expansion of our trade during the war."

The association favored an international conference to promote uniform laws and regulations governing international carriers.

H. C. Hoyle, former Minister of Railways for New South Wales and a Commissioner for his Government to the United States, asked that American business men see to it that the United States takes the place formerly occupied by Germany in the Australian trade. He said that Australians would want nothing to do with Germany commercially after the war, and that the United States, which Australia has always looked upon as "a kind of big brother," would be able to get and to hold that trade.

There was no doubt, he said, that America could build bigger ships and speedier ships than Germany. There was cheering when he declared he hoped to see the merchant ships entering Australian ports after the war flying the Stars and Stripes instead of the German flag.

William C. Downs, American Commercial Attaché at Rio de Janeiro, told how the war had resulted in drawing most of the nations of the Western Hemisphere closer together and promoted friendly commercial and political relations.

P. H. W. Ross, President of the National Marine League of the United States, speaking on "Development of the American Merchant Marine," told how before the war it was difficult to interest Congress and the national authorities in a merchant marine proposal.

"Then came the war," he said, "and all the bewailings of the National Marine League were justified, and from that day the country has turned from a condition of maritime lethargy to one of feverish activity."

He declared that it was up to the exporters of America to decide whether the great American merchant marine would transport their goods or the goods of exports of other countries.

Officers elected were: President, George E. Smith, President of the Royal Typewriter Company; First Vice President, H. C. Lewis, Treasurer of the National Paper and Twine Company; Second Vice President, Frank L. Brown, President of Ransome Concrete Machinery Company; Third Vice President, H. L. Demarest of Green, Tweed & Co.; Treasurer, F. D. Waterman, President of L. E. Waterman & Co.; Secretary, E. V. Douglass. Directors: James A. Farrell, President of the United States Steel Corporation, and W. W. Nickols, both for three years, and E. C. Lufkin for two years.

The urgent need for the commandeering of all American shipping by the United States Government, as will be done on Oct. 15, was told last night by Andre Tardieu, French High Commissioner to this country, in a speech before the association at the Hotel Biltmore, in which he said that France now had 1,000,000 tons of munitions on American piers and no ships to transport the supplies to Europe. He asked the business men of America to do all in their power to aid in the transportation of supplies to France, not only for the support of the French and British, but of our own troops there. He paid a high compliment to the American producers and exporters for the way in which they had rallied to the war needs of the Allies.

JEWISH REFUGEES ARRIVE.

After traveling for six months by sea and land and encountering many hardships, ninety-one Jewish refugees arrived yesterday at an Atlantic port from Palestine to join their relatives in this country. The party consisted of ten old men, forty women, and forty-one children. The majority of them had nothing but the clothing they were wearing. A few of the women had managed to save a small part of their possessions when they were driven from their homes in Jaffa and Jerusalem.

Jacob S. Davidson, who was accompanied by his wife and daughter, said that when they left Jaffa in April on the United States cruiser Des Moines there were about 40,000 Jews in Palestine. Letters they had received in Switzerland from friends stated that no food could be obtained now in Palestine, and if relief was not sent before Winter the people would starve to death. There was a prospect for food supplies to get into Jerusalem through the British capture of the city, because they would open the ports of Jaffa and Haifa.

About 300 refugees were expected to arrive later, Mr. Davidson said. He is going to his brother, who lives at 120 Cannon Street, New York.

The women and children who have incorrect addresses will be cared for at the Hebrew Sheltering and Immigrant Aid Society's home, 225 East Broadway, until their relatives are found. Other New York families in the party were Mrs. Yudis Davis and two children, going to join her husband, K. C. Davis, at 115 East 112th Street; Motcha Cohen, 183 Varet Street, Brooklyn, and Mrs. H. Winograd and her child, who came to her husband, of 317 Marcy Avenue, Brooklyn.

BARON FAIRFAX IN LORDS.

EDINBURGH, Oct. 10.—Baron Fairfax of Cameron, who formerly lived in New York, the Earl of Lindsay, and Lord Forbes were today elected by the Scottish Peers to sit and vote in the House of Lords.

Lord Fairfax was formerly Albert Kirby Fairfax, member of the firm of William P. Bonbright & Co. of London and New York. His mother was the daughter of Colonel Edmund Kirby of the United States. He was born in Virginia in 1871.

In November, 1908, he relinquished his American citizenship, and before the Committee on Privileges of the House of Lords established his claim to "assume the title, honor, and dignity of the Twelfth Baron of Cameron." The title per se, however, did not give him a seat in the House of Lords.

A Scottish peer may have a seat in the House of Lords by hereditary right, by creation of the Sovereign, or by virtue of office, but others are elected by their peers to their seats. The same is true of some Irish peers. By the Act of Union between England and Scotland the Scottish peers send sixteen representatives to the House of Lords, who sit until Parliament is dissolved.

PIERRE DU PONT UPHELD IN DISPUTE

RESULT ANNOUNCED TODAY

Special to The New York Times.

WILMINGTON, Del., Oct. 10.—A vote representing approximately two-thirds of all the stock not disqualified from voting was cast at the special stockholders meeting E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., held here today, against a proposal to acquire for the company the stock formerly owned by General T. Coleman du Pont. The ownership of the stock, which has been the subject of litigation for two years or more, is now vested in Pierre S. du Pont, President of the company, and a syndicate composed of men associated with him in its management, who acquired it from General du Pont by purchase.

When the polls closed at 6 o'clock this evening 300,108 shares out of a total of 473,132 eligible to vote had been voted to sustain Pierre S. du Pont and those associated with him in their ownership of the former T. Coleman du Pont holdings, including 14,599 shares of preferred stock of the E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company and 126,628 shares of common stock of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. The minority vote is not known as the ballots will not be counted until tomorrow.

The meeting was held under an order issued by Judge J. Whitaker Thompson in the United States District Court, and was the culmination of sensational and bitter litigation which ended with a decision against Pierre S. du Pont and his associates. There is no likelihood, however, that the vote today will end the fight, for the minority has already filed a protest with ex-Judge Daniel O. Hastings, special master. The protest reads in part:

"In preservation of our rights under the exception allowed by the Court, and in order to prevent any future misunderstanding, we notify the special master that we maintain and will insist upon our objections to the submission to the stockholders of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. of the question submitted to them at this meeting, and that all participation in this meeting by our clients, either by voting or otherwise, is subject to the foregoing objections and without prejudice to our rights to maintain them. Very truly yours,

"HENRY P. BROWN,
"ROBERT PENNINGTON,
"Counsel."

Met in Directors' Room.

Iron-clad rules had been established by the Court for the meeting today. The form of the resolution on which the stockholders were to vote, the form of proxies and of the ballot itself, all had been decreed by Special Master Hastings under court supervision. The meeting was held in the Directors' room in the du Pont Building. Most of the voting was by proxy. The majority stock was voted by H. M. Barksdale, Chairman of the Committee on Proxies of the Pierre du Pont group. Robert Pennington performed the same function for the minority. Fewer than half a hundred men were in attendance.

Members of the du Pont family, who in financial and family feuds had been arrayed on opposite sides for years, found themselves under the same roof for the first time in years and exchanged polite smiles, but did not speak except in the conventional phrases of greeting.

"Do the stockholders now desire to acquire for the company the 63,314 shares of the common stock of E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company formerly held by T. Coleman du Pont, with the right to require the defendants to turn over to the company the 126,628 shares of the common stock of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co.; and, further, to require the defendants to account for the cash which they have received in excess of the amount paid by them, with interest, as the purchase price for the said 63,314 shares of the common stock and 14,549 shares of the preferred stock of E. I. du Pont de Nemours Powder Company, and further to require the defendants to account for the Anglo-French bonds received by them as dividends and which have not been converted into cash?

"For the information of the stockholders it is proper to state that from the statements filed in this cause by the defendants it appears that if the stockholders desire to exercise the right to acquire said stocks and to require the defendants to account for the excess in cash and the Anglo-French bonds not converted into cash received by them as aforesaid, it will not be necessary for the company to pay anything to the defendants, for they have been repaid in cash more than the amount paid by them, with interest for said stocks purchased from T. Coleman du Pont."

Before the balloting began H. M. Barksdale, Chairman of the Committee on Proxies for the Majority, announced that he had proxies for 2,000 or more stockholders and more than 300,000 shares, and asked whether they should be cast en bloc or individually.

"It seems to me after consultation with counsel for both sides," said Mr. Hastings, "that it will be wise to receive all the ballots and postpone the examination of the ballots until these are counted after the polls close."

Voting of Excluded Shares.

Mr. Barksdale also announced that he held proxies for the du Pont Securities Company. This was organized by Pierre S. du Pont and his associates as a holding company for the T. Coleman du Pont stock. The court had already ruled that all the T. Coleman du Pont stock should be excluded from voting at the special meeting. The holdings of the Securities Company aggregated 56,782 shares.

"We propose to vote that stock," said Mr. Barksdale, "realizing, of course, that the court has held it cannot be counted."

W. A. Glasgow, Jr., chief counsel for the minority group, submitted the foregoing protest and some other protests signed by several of the plaintiffs in the court proceedings. One of these was against the voting of any shares held by members of the defendant group. Another was against the voting of any stock given as bonus to employes of the company. A third was against the voting of stock held in trust by any of the defendants in the court proceedings. A fourth and broader protest read as follows:

"We, the undersigned, holders of stock of E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co., do protest against the receipt and counting at this meeting of votes cast upon shares of stock owned by or held for present employes of the company or of any person related to or under the influence or control of the defendants, Pierre S. du Pont, Irene E. du Pont, Lamont du Pont, A. Felix du Pont, John J. Raskob, Robert Rulith, Morgan Carpenter, Harry G. Haskell, Harry F. Brown, William Coyne, John P. Laffey, and the du Pont Securities Company, or any of them, and we request that opportunity be later given to us to show to the master or the court the position and relation of such voters."

All the protests were signed by Alfred I. du Pont, Ernest du Pont, and Francis I. du Pont. Philip F. du Pont, original plaintiff in the court proceedings, was absent, nor did his signature appear on the formal protests which are to pave the way for future litigation.

When the voting began the Special Master received the ballots with proxies attached as they were produced from bags and dress suit cases and carried forward in big stacks by the lawyers. Three women stockholders attended the meeting. They were Mrs. Charles Copeland, who is a sister of Pierre S. du Pont; Mrs. Rogers Wilson, and Miss Emily P. Bissell. Mrs. Copeland held individually or as Trustee 3,020 shares. These were voted for the dominant "defendant" group.

Brothers' Votes Split.

Another stockholder who appeared in person to vote was William P. Gest, President of the Fidelity Trust Company of Philadelphia. He is Trustee for 19,000 shares belonging to the Alexis I. du Pont estate and held for Eugene and Philip F. du Pont. Philip F. du Pont started the court proceedings and Eugene, his brother, is on the other side of the fight. Mr. Gest voted 3,000 shares for the minority for Philip du Pont, 3,000 for the majority on behalf of Eugene, and the remaining 13,000 in a block for the majority.

After the meeting an analysis of the vote cast for the "defendant" group was made public. It read in part:

"The vote cast for the present management shows that out of the holdings of the disinterested stockholders amounting to 213,378 shares, 201,070 were cast against the plaintiffs in the case. The management of the company was supported by every officer and Director of the company, and by sixty of the sixty-five members of the du Pont family, excluding the plaintiffs. The latter are owners of 91,036 shares against 96,171 owned by the defendants, leaving 285,925 in the hands of non-interested stockholders. Of these 316,990, or 76 per cent., were voted for the defendants. These stockholders numbered 2,034, or 88 per cent., of the total of 2,293."

Special Master Hastings announced that while the ballots are being examined and counted tomorrow, he would listen to protests from both sides against votes cast today. He is not authorized to rule finally on any of these protests, but must report to the court, which will rule finally on the validity of these.

The Plymouth Theatre, Arthur Hopkins's contribution to New York's rapidly growing list of playhouses, opened its doors last night with Clare Kummer's comedy, "A Successful Calamity," as its attraction. The new house is immediately west of the Booth, in Forty-fifth Street, being of the group which includes the Booth, the Broadhurst, and the Shubert. Its completion makes this section one of the city's most important theatrical centres, with eight playhouses within a radius of a few hundred feet.

The new theatre was built by the Shuberts, and has been leased for a number of years by Mr. Hopkins. It follows the prevailing mode in theatre building in that it is simple in design, and is finished in brown, blue, and gold. The seating capacity is about 1,000, there being only one balcony.

Miss Kummer's polite comedy is acted for the most part by the same cast which appeared in it during its great success at the Booth in the Spring. William Gillette, of course, continues in the leading rôle, and among those who remain are Estelle Winwood, Ruth Findlay, Richard Sterling, William Devereux, Manart Kippen, and Charles Lane. Roland Young and Richard Barbee, who have been promoted to Miss Kummer's newer comedy, "The Rescuing Angel," are replaced quite satisfactorily by Robert Rendell and Norman Keedwell.

The entertainment was under the patronage of the Italian Consul General, General Cavalier Gaetano Paccardi. On the Italian Executive Committee were Miss Nina E. Maresi, Miss Lina Yorr, Mrs. Paola Berizzi, Mrs. May Molossi, Miss Margherita Bucci, Miss Marie Frugone, Miss Adele Bucci, Mrs. S. Shaw, Mrs. Frank Brunella, Mrs. F. A. Zunino, Mrs. L. Weygandt, Signor Christofaro Gambolati, Signor Vincenzo de Santo, and Signor Vittario Diana.

Musicians sang and played, and Signor de Santo told of Italy's part in the war. There were also athletic exhibitions by members of the Piemonte Athletic Club and the Sportiva Club.

BRIDE OF G. B. GLAENZER.

Mrs. M. Lynch Knoderer Weds New Yorker at the Ritz-Carlton.

The wedding of Mrs. M. Lynch Knoderer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward C. Lynch of Philadelphia, to G. Brette Glaenzer of this city, took place at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in the small ballroom at the Ritz-Carlton. The Rev. Dr. J. Herman Randall of the Mount Morris Baptist Church, performed the ceremony in the presence of a few relatives and friends.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Nancy Lynch. Fritz G. Achelis was Mr. Glaenzer's best man. Following the ceremony a small reception was held.

Mr. Glaenzer is a graduate of Yale, class of '07, and belongs to the Rumson Country and Merchants' Club.

Capt. A. S. Boyd Wed in California.

The marriage has been announced of Captain Allan Stuart Boyd, formerly of this city, and a grandson of the late David I. Boyd of Albany, and Miss Kate Gwynne Bennett of Beverley, Cal., which took place in that city on Sept. 25 at the home of the bride's aunt, Miss Charlotte Greet. As the bride's father, Col. C. C. Bennett, and her two brothers, Major A. P. Bennett and Lieutenant B. O. Greet Bennett, are at the front with the Canadian army, the wedding was a quiet one. Captain Boyd was stationed at Presidio, Cal., when he met his bride and later was stationed at Nogales and at Panama. He is now attached to the 47th Infantry at Syracuse, N. Y.

Miss Mabel Harvey Weds an Editor.

The marriage of Miss Mabel Harvey, daughter of the former Sheriff of Queens County and Mrs. Herbert S. Harvey of Flushing, L. I., and William J. Parnell of Northampton, Mass., editor and publisher of The Norwood Press, took place yesterday forenoon in St. Michael's Church, Flushing. Mgr. Eugene J. Donnelly officiated. Mrs. Arthur Tetreault was matron of honor, and John Parnell acted as best man for his brother.

WAR WORK SEEN AT ELECTRIC SHOW

Food Administration Demonstrates How Eatables May Be Economically Prepared.

Electricity's part in the war is illustrated in many ways at the 1917 Electrical Exposition, which opened at the Grand Central Palace last night. In addition to the industrial exhibits, with the war note in many of them, there are special displays by the War Department, Navy Department, Red Cross Society, United States Food Administration, and New York City Food Aid Committee. In each of these electricity is shown as an important factor in war work. Each of the exhibits by the Government and patriotic organizations aims to present some important side of its work, which it is deemed needful that the public better understand and appreciate. In this respect the Electrical Exposition surpasses all its predecessors in interest and vital purpose.

The Navy Exhibit's special aim is to put before the people a concrete idea of the tools which the navy is using in this war. Every fighting type in the U. S. service is illustrated by a model in the display, U-boats, destroyers, cruisers, scouts, pre-dreadnoughts, and super-dreadnoughts. Interior mechanisms are shown to illustrate how the ammunition is fed to the guns. There are two models of the latest submarines, which cost $6,000 apiece. Real mines, real torpedoes, without the explosives, are there to show with what weapons the men of the navy fight the war at sea. Bluejackets, back from the war zone, explain how the weapons are used, how the automatics squirt lead as out of a hose, how the destroyers shoot shells at the submarines, how fast the torpedoes travel through the water, and how long the submarine can stay under the water. The ship models illustrate the evolution of the navy from the small frigate of 1812 to the ponderous battleship of today.

In the army exhibit are presented late appliances for carrying on the war in Europe. One is a new trench telephone set for use by our troops in Europe. There is a portable radio equipment made to be carried on the backs of mules in mountain regions. The Signal Corps of the army has on exhibition a wireless apparatus designed to be drawn by a four-horse team, with a capacity for sending messages 100 miles. A unique feature of this equipment is that the electrical energy is generated by two men turning a wheel.

The entire third floor of the Grand Central Palace is given over to the Red Cross exhibit, the largest single display of the show, which is under the auspices of the New York County Chapter. The aim is to give the public a comprehensive presentation of Red Cross work. One department is a surgical dressing room, where all the new surgical dressings are demonstrated. For the first time a public demonstration is given of a new electrically operated device which cuts bandages by a revolving circular knife which may be shoved over a table like an iron, cutting true to the line of the pattern marked. There is also a booth where knitting is taught. In another department garments for refugees are being made. A workroom is given over to teaching new applicants how to make surgical dressings. Field activities of the nurses are shown, how patients are transferred from the operating tent to the base hospital. Another model shows the work of handling the wounded from the trenches.

The United States Food Administration and the New York City Food Aid Committee have each a demonstration kitchen to show how food may be economically prepared and also how substitutes may be used for staples, especially war bread with a reduced amount of flour. By substituting potatoes or oatmeal it is shown that the amount of flour can be reduced from one-third to one-half and the palatable quality of the food preserved. One of the recipes given out is known as "Edison war bread." There is also war cake. During the show the Food Administration will ask women to sign pledges not to waste food and to use less costly substitutes liberally. The United States Department of Agriculture, Bureau of Chemistry, has a large home economics exhibit to aid in this work. A canning kitchen shows the most scientific method of canning fruits, vegetables, and meats.

Other Government exhibits are the Department of Commerce, Lighthouse Service, Weather Bureau, Bureau of Public Roads, Forest Service, and the Census Bureau.

The Jovian League, composed of executive and department heads in the electrical companies in New York, yesterday made plans to sell $1,000,000 worth of Liberty bonds. Each member undertook to dispose of $10,000 worth.

"Anthony in Wonderland" Oct. 23.

Henry Miller in "Anthony in Wonderland," a comedy by Monckton Hoffe, will open at the Criterion Theatre on Tuesday night, Oct. 23. It was originally planned that this play should be used to open the new Henry Miller Theatre, now in course of construction in Forty-third Street, but that theatre will not be ready until the new year. The Robert Hilliard play, "The Scrap of Paper," will end its engagement at the Criterion a week from Saturday night.

VIENNESE OPERETTA HAS PREMIERE HERE

"Das Dreimaederlhaus," which its local producers call "The House of the Three Girlies," a modern Viennese "singspiel," with immortal classics of Schubert sung by two tenors and others of the cast, was given for the first time in this country at the Irving Place Theatre last evening. It was a musical première of an unusual sort, and not only attracted one of the largest audiences of German-speaking theatregoers in some years, but is already scheduled for several weeks' stay in place of the usual repertory.

The three-act musical play, by Willner and Reichert, from the novel of Rudolf Hans Bartsch, was a novelty in the Austrian Capital just before the war, when it ran for 700 nights, and had even been accepted for production in English here. The familiar lyrics arranged for the stage by Heinrich Berte, the dances added by Heinz Lingen, and a general gayety in the performance itself, resulted in curtain calls for the singers, for Otto Schreiner, who conducted, and for Director Rudolf Christians.

Franz Schubert plays a Miles Standish rôle in the triple love story, with the Baron Schober as a John Alden of old Vienna in the sweet-and-twenties of the last century. These two tenor parts were taken by Angelo Lippich and Ludwig Eybisch, and the second act especially pleased a musical assembly with its echoes of the "Erl-King," the Schubert "Serenade," the "Ungeduld" that he called his "bride song," and the "Unfinished Symphony," in which the orchestra suggested that music, after all, was the composer's bride.

As the three daughters of the house of Tschoell, there were Viola Graham, Lottie Engel, and Flora Arndt, completing many a neat trio, and, with the stage lovers, an occasional sextet.

Giuditta Grisi was acted with spirit by Aranka Eben. John Feistel was the famous painter, von Schwind. Otto Meyer, Ernst Robert and others handled their Vienna dialect with ease. Bertha Walden was a comic housekeeper, and Christian Rub got more laughs in three minutes than some stars in as many hours on Broadway.

It was a gala night for the theatre, its versatile company, and its patrons, who received with delight and instant recognition all the songs of the greatest of melodists, and the only one who died younger than Mozart. Herr Lippich had a line that was appreciated when he said of one of the most applauded tunes, "That's not mine, but Mozart's." His makeup after the portraits of the composer was excellent and he contrived to hold the sympathy of the house for the unloved hero, against all the three heroines and their loverlike train.

KEEP $2.50 TICKET PRICE.

Klaw & Erlanger's Orchestra Scale Is to be Inclusive of War Tax.

The action of the Globe and Century Theatres in raising the price of orchestra seats to $3 yesterday brought forth a statement from Klaw & Erlanger, who announced that they not only did not contemplate a similar action but that the price of $2.50, now being charged by them for orchestra seats for "The Riviera Girl," would be inclusive of the 10 per cent. war tax after Nov. 1. Tickets sold at $2 or under, they declared, would carry with them the obligation of paying the tax. The announced $3 rate at the Globe and Century will be exclusive of the tax.

Marc Klaw, in discussing the tax situation later, said that the probable method of collection to be adopted would be patterned after the system found to be successful in Canada. This consists in the selling of stamps, but the stamps are dropped into a receptacle as the patron enters the theatre and are not affixed to the theatre tickets. They would be purchasable from the Government in rolls, made up similarly to the present rolls of motion picture tickets.

Ligon Johnson, counsel for the United Managers' Protective Association, is now in Washington to confer with officials of the Treasury Department on the tax. The use of sworn statements, originally suggested, has been practically abandoned because of the great expense of this system, and the sale of stamps to be affixed to the tickets is now frowned upon because of the confusion which would result in the event of refunds or exchanges.

$15,000 FOR INTRODUCTION.

Broker Sues Promoter for Presenting Him to Senator Reynolds.

A valuation of $15,000 is put upon an introduction to ex-Senator William H. Reynolds in a suit brought by James T. Blake, a broker, of 15 Broad Street, against James S. Rear, an Arizona mine promoter, who lives at the Hotel Plaza. Blake has sued Rear to recover the sum stated for introducing Rear to C. Palmer Woodbury, St. John Smith, and Senator Reynolds, as the result of which Woodbury bought for himself, Smith, and Reynolds the control of the Lavell Gold Mining Company. Blake contends that his introduction brought about the deal.

Blake has also sued Rear for $10,000 damages for slander, alleging that Rear accused him of making public the information concerning the dinner to Senator Reynolds attended by Mayor Mitchel, and called him a "conspirator," "traitor," and "news monger." Blake contends that he had nothing to do with the publicity concerning the Reynolds dinner. Rear sold the copper claim bought by Reynolds and his associates and which Reynolds and his party went to Arizona to inspect just before the dinner in question.

Rear denies that he has made accusations against Blake, and insists that nothing is due him.

HEARD MURDER PREDICTION.

Woman Says Deutsch Expected Philadelphia Tragedy.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 10.—A recital on the witness stand by Mrs. Clara Freeman of a conversation she said she overheard between Isaac Deutsch and Police Lieutenant David Bennett in an Atlantic City apartment house last August, in which the witness said Deutsch told Lieutenant Bennett, "There will be murder yet in the Fifth Ward," was the feature in the hearing today of Mayor Smith and eight others on charges of conspiracy to murder in connection with the killing of a policeman on Primary Election Day.

Bennett, according to Mrs. Freeman, said, "We will arrest the whole bunch of them on Primary Day," meaning, the prosecution contended, the political followers of James A Carey, who defeated Deutsch for Councilmanic nomination in the ward.

At the conclusion of today's hearing the prosecution announced that it would call no more witnesses and that counsel tomorrow would sum up the testimony. Judge Brown will be asked to hold all of the defendants, including the Mayor, in substantial bail for trial.

FREE 8-LESSON
SPANISH COURSE
ALSO FREE EIGHT-LESSON
FRENCH COURSE
On next Monday, October 15th, there will commence in beautiful Gordon-Detwiler Auditorium, Tribune Building, 154 Nassau Street, just opposite City Hall Park, a wonderful free eight-lesson Spanish Course, and also a similar free eight-lesson French Course. Both of these classes will be identical in every way to the recent normously successful French Classes to which free tickets were distributed by The New York Evening Globe. Both classes will be taught by the new direct conversational method of the Gordon-Detwiler Institute which eliminates most all syntax and dry rules of grammar. During either of these courses you should master the fundamental rules of the language you study; also you should acquire a vocabulary of three hundred words and at least three hundred idioms in everyday use.
The entire eight-lesson course costs you nothing. Your only expense will be for a Gordon-Detwiler 200 page Instructor, which sells regularly for $1.50, but which will be sold to you at the reduced price of $1.00.
Both classes will meet for lessons three times weekly, on Monday, Wednesday and Friday The various lessons are repeated numerous times on each class day. For SPANISH you may attend at 11.15 A. M., or 4.15, or 5.15, or 7.15, or 8.15 P. M., and for FRENCH you may attend class at 12.15, or 3.15, or 6.15 P. M., as best suits your convenience
The tickets will not last long. Call at Gordon-Detwiler Institute at once and get yours, or write for one enclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope, to Gordon-Detwiler Institute, Tribune Building, New York, and the next day will bring your ticket to you.

Comparisons Show the Value of Concentration

English II	80	Cicero	63
French II	60	Advanced Latin Composition	63

The Safest Investment In the World

A Liberty Bond is a Government Bond, guaranteed by the United States of America. That means that all the limitless resources and incalculable wealth of the greatest and richest country in the world are pledged as security for the bond.

A Liberty Bond can be a poor investment if the Germans win the war and come over here and make a second Belgium of our country. But in that case you would lose all your possessions, including your liberty and possibly your life. You would no longer be interested in bonds or in anything else.

Buying Liberty Bonds is Loaning to Our Government

A Liberty Bond is a loan to the Government, and not a gift. It pays 4% interest. It teaches you to save and helps you to save. It is as good as money. You can sell it any time you wish.

A Liberty Bond is sold to you to get money to pay the cost of the war. If the bonds are not bought, the Government will tax us, and tax us heavily, to get the money. And the money you pay in taxes is gone forever.

A Liberty Bond supplies the money to feed, clothe, and arm our soldiers, save precious lives, shorten the war, win the war and lift the curse of German oppression and brutality from helpless, stricken, suffering people across the sea.

How many will you buy? Consult any bank or bond house. You can buy on easy partial payments.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

The unexpected announcement that the People's Gas Light Company of Chicago, until recent months regarded as one of the conservative dividend payers in the industrial list, had decided against making the usual quarterly disbursement, undoubtedly played a part yesterday in stimulating a decline that made more headway than the bear movement has been showing lately, but other factors of a wider significance have been operating for lower levels. The gas industry is subject to its own difficulties, in no way bearing upon the business of many other industrial lines, and while the loss in People's Gas was exceptionally large, there were declines in other issues of greater importance.

The Directors of People's Gas explained the passing of the dividend on the ground that it was necessary to conserve the cash resources rather than go to the banks for loans under prevailing conditions, but traders saw in the omission a confession of the inability of many of the public utilities to hold up net income while rates remain stationary and costs are advancing. People's Gas sold down to 44, though it rallied to 45½, and its net decline of 6⅛ points brought the week's loss in this issue up to 20 points. Consolidated Gas sold at 93, ending the day 2 points higher with a loss of 3⅞; Ohio Cities Gas dropped to 31⅞, closing off 3¼, while Laclede Gas declined 2⅛.

Nearly all of the industrials were found lacking in support when attempts were made to liquidate lines of stock, the margins of which have been depleted by the long period of weakness. Steel was very active, contributing nearly one-third to the day's turnover of more than one million shares, and ranged from 106 down to 101½, closing near the bottom with a net decline of 2⅛. Bethlehem lost 6 and the B shares 6¾. Continental Can dropped 7 points on a single sale. United States Industrial Alcohol lost 4 points, United States Smelting and Refining 3, Underwood Typewriter 4, Pittsburg Coal 4⅛, Crucible 2⅝, Brooklyn Union Gas 4¾, American Locomotive 2½, American Smelting 3¼, and Beet Sugar 4⅛.

For a time the railroads were overlooked, and with the exception of Lehigh Valley held their previous levels, but before the close of the day the wave of liquidation engulfed them and caused some heavy recessions. Lehigh lost 1¼, Louisville & Nashville 2⅜, Nashville & Chattanooga 3½, New York Central 1⅜, Reading 3⅛, Northern Pacific 1¼, and Norfolk & Western 1½. All through the list there were indications of weakened accounts being thrown overboard.

The decline in the stock market at the height of the campaign to sell the new Liberty Loan is as unexpected as it is unwelcome, but the new revenue measure seems to have destroyed for the time being what investment buying the decline has brought out. In many quarters in the financial district it is believed that peace is coming into sight, and traders are trying to guess the effect of the war's end upon the steel industry, now turning out its products at a rate far above the maximum demand shown before the war sets new standards of consumption.

LONDON MARKET CHEERFUL.

LONDON, Oct. 10.—All sections of the stock market had a cheerful tone today. Despite a good demand for the new war bonds there was quite a good business in war loans, consols, Brazilian bonds and other first class securities at firm prices. Mining shares were more active and rubber and industrial stocks received attention.

Money was in moderate supply and discount rates were steady. Exchequer returns show a reduction in the sales of Treasury bills last week and also in the total amount outstanding.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Getting to Work.

Without any flourishes of trumpets the Chartering Committee of the U. S. Shipping Board has been engaged for some days in gathering up the reins and, unless all indications fail, next Monday, the day when the Government requisition of all American steam tonnage above 1,500 tons dead weight capacity goes into effect, will find it ready to go ahead without lost time or motion. Shipping men are still to be found wearing that worried, distrustful look, but they are losing it gradually, and the idea is beginning to percolate that Monday may not be a day of dread after all, and that the Government does not really intend to put them all out of business.

The Chartering Policy.

The Chartering Committee, it is becoming evident in the preliminary steps they are taking, has the free hand and full confidence and backing from Washington which was recognized, when the creation of the committee was announced, as indispensable to its success. It is already passing upon and approving charters submitted to them, and as it is working in complete harmony with the Inter-Allied Conference in London, its approval is now all an American shipping man needs. The committee has undertaken this work gradually but has already gotten its work so well in hand that it is able to promise any ship operator who lays a case before it that it will be promptly disposed of. Consequently the shipping industry seems in a fair way to find out what for months it has wanted to know—where it stands.

No Disruption of Business.

The one thing the Chartering Committee and the Shipping Board apparently want most, just now, to impress upon the shipping industry, is that they are going to interfere with business just as little as possible and that whatever regulative measures prove necessary are going to be introduced gradually, with due warning to everybody and the minimum possible amount of confusion or delay. For the present, charters are being approved on a most liberal basis, with only one or two simple, but essential, conditions. These condnitions will very likely increase in number and grow more stringent, but every new condition will be aimed straight at one thing—more efficient disposition of American merchant tonnage for war service—and will be introduced, if possible, so gradually as to tread on no one's toes.

General Motors Big Earnings.

The General Motors Corporation's statement for September was of the sort to lessen the force of bearish sentiment toward motor stocks. The official figures showed net sales amounting to $16,850,000, an increase of $5,292,939 over the same month last year, while undivided profits of $3,225,000 were $1,024,890 larger. The corporation reported that on Oct. 8 cash in bank and sight drafts with documents attached amounted to $22,043,500. Output during the month totaled 16,923 pleasure automobiles and trucks, a gain of 3,043 over September, 1916. General Motors common stock reflected the statement by a half-point advance in yesterday's generally weak market.

Missouri Pacific Earnings.

The Reorganization Committee of the Missouri Pacific have had no reason to regret their labors in lifting the road out of its troubles. The August gross earnings of $6,894,000 surpassed by more than $1,750,000 the mark which the management set last June as the desirable total for a good month's business. The new company began operations on June 1, and in the three months ended Aug. 31, a surplus above charges of $3,250,000 was earned, which was equivalent to an annual rate of about 10 per cent. on the junior stock issue after preferred dividends were paid. Earnings so substantial as these indicate both heavy traffic and a satisfactory relation between gross revenues and operating costs. The future of Missouri Pacific under the stress, increasing costs of materials, fuel, &c., will be watched carefully in quarters where pessimism over the general railway situation holds sway.

Jersey Central Stock Drops Sharply.

Central Railroad of New Jersey stock took a precipitate step downward yesterday in process of readjusting its front in accordance with the downward progress of other standard rails. The sale of 100 shares brought a decline of 53½ points from the last previous transaction, which was made last February. In computing the extent of the recession it was necessary to allow for three dividends of 2 per cent. each, which were paid between the sales. Yesterday's price of 240 displayed a drop of exactly 100 points from the bid price on Aug. 1. Jersey Central shares for years have been inactive, due to the fact, principally, that about $14,500,000 of the outstanding $27,486,000 stock is locked up in the Reading Company's treasury and the bulk of the balance above the Reading's holdings is held by estates and wealthy investors.

Liberty Bond Interim Certificates.

New York being the principal security market of the country, persons in all parts of the United States who, for one reason or another, have had occasion to sell their 3½ per cent. Liberty Loan bonds have forwarded their interim certificates to New York banks or brokerage houses. In order to make these certificates available in exchange for definitive bonds in New York, certificates issued in districts outside of this one must be exchanged for certificates issued by the Federal Reserve Bank of New York. It was learned yesterday that the local Reserve Bank has to date handled 67,157 certificates, totaling $90,824,850, which had been presented for the purposes of exchange. In all, the transactions have numbered 3,500.

What Cotton Prices Mean.

A concrete example of what the present prices cotton commands mean is afforded by the August report of the Department of Commerce on exports, compared with the figures for 1916. The exports by bales for 1917 were 459,667, and in 1916 were 425,346—an increase of only 34,321 bales. But the value of the 1916 exports was $30,394,521—that of the 1917 exports was $63,524,102, more than double. And cotton prices in 1916 were not considered, at the time, to be low, by any means—in fact, it was the high price commanded by the 1916 cotton crop that is supposed to have put the South on Easy Street.

Lackawanna Steel Profits Double.

The report of earnings of the Lackawanna Steel Company for the third quarter of 1917 and for the nine months of hte year ended Sept. 30 show that its net profits have been virtually doubled over those of 1916, partly due to increased earnings, and partly due to reductions in fixed charges. The company showed for the quarter net profits of $6,096,317, against $3,060,701 for the same period in 1916, and for the nine-month period, $18,294,532, against $8,379,043. The figures for the nine-month period are equivalent to earnings of $52.12 a share on the common stock, more than twice the earnings for 1916.

—protect your home with a Liberty Bond

The boys in khaki are going "over there" to fight so that you may stay here in peace.

They march away smiling, leaving tears behind them. You stay at home tearfully with smiles to greet you.

They're giving all they have so that you may keep what you have.

They're stamping out tyranny and oppression so that liberty and justice may endure.

Some will never return. You are needed as much as they to win this war. You have a part to play at home, as they have a duty to do abroad.

Buy a bond because it's your patriotic duty. Buy a bond because you want the war won in the right way—and the quickest. Buy a bond because it's the safest, soundest investment in the world.

The United States Government is not taking your money to keep. Every cent you invest will be returned with 4% interest yearly.

You CAN afford it!

Don't say you cannot. As little as $1 a week pays for a bond. Any bank, trust company or investment banker will buy it for you without charge. See about it today. Liberty Bonds are tax exempt except for the inheritance tax and the income tax where incomes are over $5,000 annually.

—is a current saying among the French

Three years of war have taught them its truth. Only the most efficient and costly equipment has enabled France to conserve that flesh and blood barrier standing between her and the most cruel enemy in history. Only the best and most abundant war material will return to France the men who are now her bulwark.

And now the sons, brothers and fathers of America are about to face the same enemy. American women will minister to them and share their perils. They go to protect you and all that makes life sweet for you.

There must be vessels to supply them, warships to guard them, food and clothing to keep them, also motors, aeroplanes, locomotives and innumerable other necessities. The most efficient protection from the enemy and the strongest assurances of victory for our troops are unlimited supplies of the best rifles, artillery and ammunition that genius, labor and money can produce.

—will America Protect Her Protectors? Say "Yes" and buy a Liberty Bond as your answer.

One dollar or more will commence the payment. Your bank or employer will tell you how. Your money will be repaid with interest by the United States Government.

SHARP BREAK HITS THE STOCK MARKET

INDUSTRIAL ISSUES FOLLOW

The stock market experienced yesterday the sharpest break which has occurred since the downward movement began two months ago. Under the influence of heavy selling of gas company stocks on the Stock Exchange, including Peoples Gas, Consolidated Gas, Brooklyn Union Gas, and Ohio Cities Gas, the general price list receded from 3 to more than 7 points during the morning and recovered only slightly in later dealings.

The decline was precipitated at the start of business by news of the passing of the Peoples Gas dividend, and as new low ground on the current movement was reached by numerous stocks much forced liquidation of margined accounts occurred. In brokerage circles it was said that impaired margins accounted for half of the day's sales, while speculative operations on the short side was believed to have played a prominent part in the drop. Consolidated Gas at 93 sold at a lower price than at any time since the 1907 panic, and United States Steel common moved down to 101½ at one time, a new low record for the present swing of the market.

Traders in steel watched the ticker closely for indications of banking support, but none could be detected. Inquiries among the banks indicated that the uncertainties of the war tax law's effect on corporation earnings and on individual incomes were checking purchases of stocks. The downward surge of public utility issues was explained in brokerage offices by the increasing cost of fuel, oil, and other materials, but reasons for the retreat of steel and other industrial issues could not so easily be found. The combined effect of forced selling, liquidation of investment accounts, and short sales was a turnover in excess of 1,000,000 shares, the most active market in more than a month.

In this table the gross and net declines of some of the leading issues are set forth, with price comparisons:

The Standard Oil shares melted down rapidly in the market which was at times almost bare of bids. Declines running from 20 to 40 points occurred on the curb among these high-prices issues, including Standard of New Jersey, Standard of Ohio, Atlantic Refining and Ohio Oil.

The retreat of security prices had reflection in high-grade bonds as well as in stocks. A puzzling factor of the day's development was that prices sold off so rapidly in the face of some favorable announcements of corporation earnings. The Lackawanna Steel Company reported profits in the nine months ended Sept. 30 which were more than twice as large as in the same period last year. The General Motors Corporation reported a big increase in business during September, with a corresponding expansion of profits in contrast with the record of September last year.

Stock Exchange to Close Saturday.

Governors of the Stock Exchange voted yesterday to keep the Exchange closed on Saturday. The recess will extend from the close of business this afternoon until Monday morning. The Cotton Exchange will also have the double holiday. The banks will be closed on Columbus Day, but will reopen on Saturday morning.

COMMODITIES MARKETS

WHEAT.

Reports regarding the extent of Fall seeding of wheat continue most encouraging. The Weekly Weather and Crop Bulletin said that plowing and seeding are proceeding under favorable conditions, except in a few places, where it is too dry, and that the grain is germinating and growing well. According to the Price Current, the Winter wheat acreage promises to be a record one, with an increase of at least 10 per cent., compared with the area seeded last Fall. Rye—Market steady; No. 2 Western, $1.90, cost, insurance, and freight, New York.

CORN.

The corn market experienced a break of 4⅝c to 5⅝c under one of the most aggressive selling movements which has occurred for months. The pressure seemed to come from all directions, and revealed a larger outstanding long interest than was generally supposed to exist. In the local cash market No. 2 yellow corn was quoted at $2.03, and No. 2 mixed, $2.00. A cargo of Argentine corn arrived in New York yesterday, consisting of about one-quarter of a million bushels, and there was said to have been another sale of about 180,000 bushels to arrive prompt shipment at $1.70, cost, insurance, and freight, New York.

OATS.

The sharp break in corn had a bearish influence on the oats market, which closed weak, with net losses of 1⅝c to 1¾c. Some of the same factors which influenced corn affected oats, and there was a noticeable hesitation about taking an aggressive stand on the buying side. Exporters were again in evidence, taking about 500,000 bushels, and this added a certain amount of support. The local cash market was weak; standard quoted at 65½c; No. 2 white, 65½c; No. 3 white, 65c; No. 4 white, 64c to 64½c; fancy clipped white, 66c to 68c; ordinary clipped white, 64½c to 66c, all elevator.

PROVISIONS.

The provision market was weak under heavy selling, owing to a feeling of insecurity on the long side as a result of the prevailing belief that it will only be a question of a short time until the Government takes entire control of the market. Receipts of hogs at Chicago were 15,000, estimated for Thursday, 11,000; Kansas City received 7,000, and Omaha 3,500.

COTTONSEED OIL.

The rules established in the local cottonseed oil trade on Tuesday were modified somewhat by the committee yesterday, permitting 100-point fluctuations in one day throughout the entire list. The market was heavy under liquidations of outstanding long accounts and at the close showed net losses of 40 to 100 points. Total sales were 28,900 barrels. Range of prices:

COFFEE.

The coffee market was irregular yesterday. The opening was unchanged to 3 points higher on scattered buying, which some attributed to covering and others thought might reflect interest created by the more optimistic view of peace prospects or the steadiness of Brazil. There was further near-month liquidation, however, and also a little trade selling of later months as a result of which prices eased, with the market closing 3 points lower to 1 point higher. The business included exchanges of December for March at 33 points; for May at 42 and 44 points, for July at 60 points, and for September at 75 points. The spot market was unchanged on the basis of 8⅝c for Rio 7s and 9⅝ for Santos 4s. Range of prices:

SUGAR.

The sugar market was without feature, with no sales of raw sugar reported. Holders were not open making offers and there were no buyers in the market. Arbuckle continues closed down, but is offering his small balance of refined sugar at 8.60c. The American's Brooklyn plant has been closed, and Warner and the Federal are withdrawn. The American and Howell's are only accepting very limited business at 8.35c. It is the general belief that stocks of refined sugar held at the refineries are very low and that, unless raw sugar is quickly obtainable, other plants will close down. In the meantime the local demand continues quite active. Spot raw prices follow: Centrifugal, 6.90c; molasses, 6.02c; cost and freight, 5⅝c.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER—Receipts yesterday, 18,276 boxes. The supply of high grades of fresh creamery were a little short and, with fair buying interest, the market advanced ½c, with a firm tone at the close. Storage goods are sympathizing to some extent. The cold weather encouraged a little freer buying. Renovated steady, but quiet. Ladles are firmer and packing stock has no demand at late prices. EGGS.—Receipts yesterday 10,168 cases. There has been some increase in the demand and the market for desirable qualities of fresh gathered stock is showing a firmer tone, although there are still liberal accumulations of medium and undergrade stock which holders are anxious to sell. Prices are still irregular and showing a wide range, but lots containing a fair to large proportion of new eggs tend in sellers' favor. Storage eggs are having a little more inquiry, and the feeling is perhaps a shade steadier, though still unsettled and irregular. Fancy nearby white eggs of uniformly newlaid quality are very scarce and bring extreme prices; mixed and lower grades still range widely with a slow demand. Fresh gathered extras, per dozen, 45@46c; extra firsts, 43@44c; firsts, 39½@41½c; seconds, 37½@39c; thirds and poorer, 33@37c; fresh gathered dirties, No. 1, 36c@36½c; No. 2 and poorer, 30c@35½c; fresh gathered checks, good to choice, dry, 33@34c; under grades, 30@32c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, storage and insurance paid, 37½@38c; firsts, storage and insurance paid, 36½@37c; seconds, storage and insurance paid, [illegible]; lower grades, storage and insurance paid, 32@34c; refrigerator, State, whites, [illegible]; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 52@58c; ordinary to good, [illegible] 60c; gathered whites, good to fine, [illegible]; Western and Southern, gathered whites, [illegible]; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns [illegible]; gathered browns and mixed colors, [illegible].

BIG SLUMP IN COTTON

After climbing very close to and in some instances attaining the high levels of last Summer's big bull market, the local cotton market somersaulted again yesterday, and lost the greater part of its gain of the two earlier days of the week. No particular reason for the drop, which was as sudden and spectacular as Monday's rise, was in evidence, indicating that it was only the natural reaction from the swift advance which had preceded it. In fact, reports of frost damage early in the session were as bullish as those which had started the market kiting on Monday, but had little effect. December cotton broke to 25.80, 130 points below Tuesday's high level, and closed at the bottom price of the day. The general list closed barely steady, 78 to 104 points off.

The market was nervous and unsettled from the start. October opened 47 points higher, selling at 27.80, making a new high price for the season. Other months were 5 points higher to 5 points lower, and prices showed net losses of about 30 points. A quick rally preceded the publication of the weekly report from the Weather Bureau, but the market soon turned easier, as the report proved less alarming than expected. The disposition to even up long contracts was doubtless increased by the proximity of the three-day adjournment, while increased Southern selling was accompanied by reports of an easier spot basis. Wall Street and Western interests were particularly heavy sellers late in the afternoon, and the market closed within a few points of the lowest on all positions, with March showing a decline of practically 150 points from the high level of Tuesday.

The only report to reach the trade placing anything like a definite figure on frost damage came from the Boston office of a Southwestern firm, and estimated the reduction in crop prospects at not less than 400,000 bales. The weather map made a more favorable showing with a very few points reporting additional frosts, and with generally rising temperatures. The Southern selling here was more active than for some time, which tended to color the talk of an easier spot basis. The bulk of the pressure, however, was attributed to realizing or liquidation for over the holidays in view of the easier technical position, and the possibility that crop damage may prove less serious than anticipated. Exports for the day were 18,427 bales, making 979,481 so far this season, against 1,169,939 last year. Southern spot markets as officially reported were 75 points lower to 25 points higher.

—25 Years After

Ten, twenty, twenty-five years hence, when your children are grown up, this war will be the vivid remembrance of a nightmare of terror and sorrow!

Your son will probably be married and you may have a grandson as old as your son is now! The same school fees will have to be paid, clothes will be outgrown with just the same rapidity. This is the time in the boy's life when those few hundreds of dollars that you put by for him are going to be so useful.

This is thinking on ahead! But do not just think—ACT NOW—BUY A LIBERTY BOND today and prepare that nest-egg for yourself or your son or daughter twenty-five years from now. It is not only a common-sense insurance for the future—it is the best possible way of convincing yourself that you are a real American.

You can buy a bond for a dollar down today, or pay outright if you wish. Every cent you subscribe to the Second Liberty Loan of 1917 is guaranteed by the whole of the resources of the United States of America. Every single bond is safe, gilt-edged security that will return its principal back to you, plus 4% interest every year, in twenty-five years from now.

U. S. STEEL BOOKINGS DROP 573,572 TONS

September Decline Reflects Situation Caused by Price Negotiations.

TONNAGE TOTAL 9,833,477

Manufacturers, Sure of Plenty of Business, Have Not Been Active in Getting New Orders.

Unfilled orders of the Steel Corporation declined 573,572 tons during September, according to official figures issued yesterday, the total on hand when the month ended being 9,833,477 tons. This was the first monthly report since that of last October, which recorded advance orders on the books under the 10,000,000-ton mark. Last April the corporation reported contracts for 12,183,083 tons, which was the high record since the big organization was formed in 1901.

The decline of more than a half-million tons in September reflected the situation brought about by the negotiations between Government officials and steelmakers in regard to prices. In August, when the effect of price-fixing talk was also in evidence, the orders declined more than 400,000 tons. Consumers have been holding back their orders for several months, hoping for favorable prices under Government rulings. The corporation, like the other steel companies, has the certainty of plenty of business for a long period, and has not been active in getting in new orders. The decline was not unexpected in the trade, in view of the deadlock between buyers and sellers.

Commenting on the general market situation, The Iron Age says:

"New buying in steel is still negligible. With the announcements from time to time of fresh and enlarged Government building programs, the trade is coming to accept the attitude of mills in refusing further commitments for the time being, for, in addition to the direct Government needs, it is recognized that the effect passes through the ramifications of the industry to the provisions of plant extensions and the building of machinery and apparatus. Our pig iron production statistics have shown how difficult it is, with fuel and labor shortage, to increase the basic output.

"Thus it is that cancellations of contracts have not occurred; consumers cannot discover other sources of supply. Efforts to secure readjustments of contract prices have not, however, been forsaken. Many of these expire this year, but deliveries will be spread over several months into 1918. Beyond that the orders on mill books are for definite business not subject to cancellation in the ordinary acceptance of the term.

"Little sympathy for price reductions is shown where the contracts cover manufactured articles already sold and against which the contracts are a protection. But concern is felt over the distance from steel mill products which the pricing program bids fair to cover. The answer of the steel producers is that in times of heavy demand prices do not fall."

The Iron Trade Review says:

"Much importance consequently is being given to further conferences now being held at Washington between the general iron and steel committees and War Industries Board. In the meantime the industry is making such adjustments to the new price level as definite conditions will permit. In finished steel buyers find it practically impossible to obtain material at fixed schedules. Several producers, particularly in plates, continue to sell in the open market without regard to the agreed maximum, claiming their semi-finished costs compel them to do so."

The property of FELLSMERE FARMS COMPANY is about to be sold under foreclosure of a mortgage given to secure an outstanding issue of $330,000 of the above bonds, all of which have been deposited under said agreement of July 14, 1916. The Plan contemplates the purchase of the property of Fellsmere Farms Company at the foreclosure sale, and the organization of a New Company for that purpose, with a working capital of $100,000. To secure the working capital the New Company will make an issue of Five Year 7% Unsecured Gold Notes, bearing interest at the rate of seven per centum per annum, payable semi-annually. By said Plan the registered holders of the above Certificates of Deposit are permitted to subscribe to the Notes of the New Company to the extent, and upon the terms and conditions therein specified, by subscribing therefor on or before October 25, 1917, and paying therefor as follows:

10% January 15, 1918
20% February 15, 1918

The balance on or after February 15, 1918, at intervals of not less than thirty days, in amounts not exceeding 20% on any one call, and in each case upon thirty days' notice, but no call shall be made on account of subscriptions after December 31, 1918.

Under the terms of the Plan each Subscriber to Notes of the New Company of the par value of $300 will receive stock of the New Company of the par value of $1,500. All payments must be made promptly at the office of Guaranty Trust Company of New York in the City of New York, and temporary receipts will be issued for payments pending the delivery of the permanent securities.

Copies of the Plan and Agreement of Reorganization and forms of Subscriptions can be had on application to the Depositary, or to the Secretary of the Committee.

Dated, October 9th, 1917.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Heavy liquidation carried prices on the Consolidated Stock Exchange to the lowest levels for the present movement, Steel common selling at 101⅞ and Bethlehem Steel B at 76⅝, with the carriers, the other industrials and the coppers all lower. The session was a highly nervous one, the market being unsettled from the very opening. The break was ushered in at the beginning of the trading by the public utilities. By the end of the first hour the selling movement had taken in the steels and coppers, and around midday the losses were extended to the rails.

STANDARD OIL RAISES WAGES

Fifth Rise in Two Years Will Benefit 12,000 Employes.

The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey yesterday announced another increase—the fifth since July 31, 1915—in the wages of its refinery employes, by 10 per cent., the increase to become effective on Oct. 15. The increase was made, it was announced by Vice President F. F. Weller, because of the continued increase in the cost of living. The number of men affected is about 12,000, including the employes in the plants at Bayonne, Bayway, and Jersey City, N. J., Parkersburgh, W. Va., Baltimore, Md., and Baton Rouge, La.

In addition to these five increases, the company's action in September, 1915, in putting its employes on an eight-hour day is estimated as equivalent to a 19.57 per cent. increase in pay for the same amount of work. Altogether, since July 31, 1915, the company estimates its total increase in wages have amounted to 94 per cent. of the total payroll at that time.

Pullman Co. Earns $47,464,303.

The annual report of the Pullman Company for the year ended July 31 last shows that it earned from cars in operation a total of $47,464,304, and from manufacturing, rentals, &c., $1,720,255, giving a total revenue of $49,184,559. Operating expenses, repairs, taxes, &c., amounting to $29,196,668, and $6,170,584 was written off for depreciation. Dividends amounting to $9,599,784 were paid during the year, leaving $4,032,627 to be added to the surplus account.

PRICES AT HIGH RECORD.

Index Number Has Risen More Than 80 Per Cent. Since August, 1914.

Dun's Index Number of commodity prices for Oct. 1, published in the current number of Dun's Review, shows that on that date the average price of staple commodities was again the highest in history, the index number standing at $219.679, against $215.010 on Sept. 1 last, and $152.355 on Oct. 1, 1916. The index number has risen more than 80 per cent. since Aug. 1, 1914, and study of individual prices shows that except for Government regulations, the average would probably have risen still higher, as the commodities whose prices have been fixed are the only ones not to show increases, and consequently hold the average down.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

At the annual meeting of the Oregon Short Line Railroad Company, E. E. Calvin, President of the Union Pacific, was elected to the board in place of W. S. McCornick. Other Directors were re-elected. The date of the annual meetings of the Union Pacific and Short Line has been changed to the second and third Tuesdays in April, respectively.

Using Heavy Satin for Hats.

A new tendency in Fall millinery, according to the bulletin of the Retail Millinery Association of America, is the use of heavy satin for street and semi-dress hats. These hats are all satin, satin combined with velvet, or satin combined with fur. Black, brown, and taupe are the principal colors. Other things that are "good" here at present are hatters' plush hats in large and small shapes and ready-to-wear hats of panne velvet. In the trimmings, the best sellers are circular fur bands, fur bands combined with flowers, metallized flowers, steel and antique laces, ostrich fancies and bands, and various burnt effects.

Big Silk Demand Predicted.

Predictions are freely made by many in the local silk trade these days that the coming Winter and Spring will see the biggest demand for silks the industry has ever experienced. The high prices of all-wool fabrics are expected to result in a wider and more general use of silk in women's clothing than has ever prevailed heretofore. "The impetus thus given to silk," said one authority in the trade, "will carry them I believe, well through the next couple of years, even should woolen goods come down. Their admirable adaptability for the purpose and their smart appearance make them highly attractive to women of taste, and I do not believe their more general use will be unwelcomed."

The War Is Helping Them.

According to comment heard in the local dry goods trade, the war is doing lots of good to retailers located in the Southern towns near which are cantonments and training camps. Not only is a larger demand reported from these places for the kind of merchandise that is particularly useful to soldiers, especially the officers, but there is a marked increase in the call for things that are generally considered necessities in civilian life. The latter demand is attributed to the number of "women folks" of the men in khaki who have taken up temporary residence in the places in question. In some cases the extra business got in this way has been large enough to make it worth while for the dealers to come to this market a second time this season.

Drug Sales Were Limited.

Drug and Chemical Markets will say today that transactions in these trades have been more or less restricted in the last week by advances in price and a lack of supplies. Morphine is higher, and the increase in the tax on distilled spirits caused an advance in alcohol. Owing to inflated prices on numerous commodities, buyers are not inclined to replenish stocks except to meet daily requirements. Freer offerings resulted in lower prices on mercury, phenolphthalein and insoluble saccharin.

⁂

Black Undergarments Popular.

Local manufacturers of underwear for women report a growing demand for black crêpe de chine and georgette chemises. Satin, also in black, for bloomers and underskirts is likewise widely sought. The tendency toward black in preference to pink, white, or flesh color, is one of the outstanding features of the season for which manufacturers do not seem to be able to offer an explanation. Simple effects are said to most popular, though some novelties and fancy merchandise are receiving fair attention. Pajamas, it is said, are gaining more acceptance by women generally, satin and crêpe de chine proving the most favored fabrics.

Cotton Relapse Hits Gray Goods.

The break in cotton yesterday put a definite check on buying in the local gray goods market, though prices were firm at the levels reached in the recent advance. Sateens and twills were among the most active sellers of the day, and they were sold at prices that were not far below comparative bases of other cloths. Sheetings were not over-active, while the movement of printcloths was hardly more than fair. Among the sales of the latter were 38½-inch 64-60s at 10⅝ cents for shipment in November, December, and January; 38½-inch 60-52s at 9½ cents for shipment through the remainder of this year, and 60-48s in the same width at 9 cents for similar delivery. Closing spot prices follow:

39-inch, 68-72s	12c	38½-inch, 60-52s	9½c
39-inch, 56-44s	8¼c	38½-inch, 60-48s	9c
38½-inch, 64-64s	11c	27-inch, 64-60s	*7½c

Wool Coming from Australia.

The Textile Alliance, Inc. is officially informed that 4,000 bales of wool have been shipped to this country from Australia, on account of the 45,000 bales promised by the British authorities to be sold at auction for civilian use. It is further stated that 40,912 bales are being loaded on fast steamers, and are expected to leave shortly.

Supply and Demand Will Do It.

"The high prices prevailing for all-wool fabrics," said a local manufacturer of coats and suits for women, "will do more toward compelling a more extensive use of manipulated fabrics so urgently sought by Washington than any 'suggestion' short of actual legislation can hope to accomplish. Thus, it seems to me that any drastic action forbidding altogether the use of all-wool fabrics, besides being undesirable in its effect, is totally unnecessary. The old, and well-known law of supply and demand is accomplishing the necessary conservation while they are still talking down in Washington about what to do."

A well-known local firm manufacturing dresses, which on Sunday last advertised to women who want to become "knights of the grip," yesterday reported a very satisfactory response. The replies came from women who are now employed in retail cloak and suit departments, from women who have been in business for themselves, and from others who have never worked at all. The firm in question already has one woman "salesman" on the road, and as her work has been satisfactory, it was decided to carry the idea further. It is now planned to send out six when trips for the new wholesale season are in order. Quite a few of the eighteen men who are now traveling for the firm are of the draft age, and as they are called their places will be filled by women. Those who are not drafted, however, will be retained.

Furs for Auction Are on Show.

Prominent dealers from various parts of Canada and the United States, including Alaska, were in this city yesterday for a preliminary examination of the $2,000,000 worth of furs that will be put up at public auction in the Masonic Hall on Monday next and the four following days. The pelts to be sold were on view at the warehouse of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, and the dealers were busy looking them over until nearly midnight. The assortment includes practically every kind of fur from common house cats to the richest Russian sables. In view of the present sold-up condition of the most popular skins, trade opinion was that the prices obtained at the sale would be high.

WOOL MARKET IS ACTIVE.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 10.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"The wool market continued strong and active during the week with more or less of an advance. Fleeces have been a feature with quarter-blood and three-eighths-blood grades particularly in demand. Low scoured wools were sold in fair sized lines. Fine scoured wools sold also fairly freely, particularly snow white baled capes.

"The woolen goods market is firm and greater strength probably will develop. Precedence is being given to Government order.

"That the cotton goods market has advanced during the week is an inevitable development through the prices for raw material, and the prospects of still higher wage scales. There is a much less tendency to place orders for delivery during the coming Spring which shows extreme conservatism on the part of the buyers. With the increase in prices, however, the buying has not broadened greatly."

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10.—The third day of the Funston fur auction saw some sensational advances in prices. The attendance again was large and there were many new arrivals. The bidding was brisk and competition keen. The total realized at the sale thus far has almost reached the $2,000,000 mark.

Patagonian kitt fox skins advanced 10 per cent. over the price realized last April. A 10 per cent. advance on gray foxes also was noted. Marmots went up 20 per cent. and lynx skins advanced 40 per cent.

Moles advanced 25 per cent. over the April prices, and black bear, brown bear, and grizzly bear skins went up 20 per cent. Polar bear skins brought 40 per cent. more than they did in April, and the largest gains were in wolf skins, which sold at a price 60 per cent. over those last April.

TO HELP CONSERVE WOOL.

At a meeting held yesterday in the Waldorf-Astoria attended by 300 men representing the woolen industry of the United States, resolutions were unanimously adopted ratifying the program for wool conservation suggested by the Committee on Supplies and the Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense.

The meeting was addressed by Charles Eiseman of the Committee on Supplies, and by L. W. Shaw, Chairman of the Commercial Economy Board, both of whom are said to have asserted the need of conserving the country's wool supply in order to assure the fulfilling of Government requirements to clothe the army and navy. Reporters were not admitted to the meeting, but typewritten statements of the action taken were subsequenly furnished them.

Herbert E. Peabody, President of the American Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers' Association, presided, and in introducing Mr. Shaw of the Commercial Economy Board, pointed out that he was necessarily in close touch with national affairs concerning the war. "He has been given a duty to perform,' explained Mr. Peabody, "and those of us who have been thrown into contact with him can unreservedly testify to his sincerity of purpose and persistency toward such ends as his information and war experience lead him to believe are necessary." Mr. Peabody further pointed out that Mr. Shaw did not come as a dictator, and that he expected the woolen industry would demonstrate its patriotism beyond doubt by a complete response to the country's needs.

Mr. Shaw said that he conceived it to be his mission in addressing the woolen and worsted manufacturers to bring to them an atmosphere of war, to impress upon them that the country is at war, and that the seriousness of that fact could not be exaggerated. He indicated that in meeting the requirements of the Government and the needs of civilians, it would be necessary for woolen and worsted manufacturers to seriously alter their usual methods, and to do that most difficult thing, depart from long standing habits. He was most emphatic in indicating that the conservation of raw material was the first and cardinal duty, and everything that could possibly be done toward that end, should be done.

Mr. Eisenman said that arrangements had very recently been concluded whereby Great Britain has agreed to release to the United States for military purposes, approximately seventy million pounds of Australian wool. He urged that the significance of this be not exaggerated, that it would take a very short time for the machinery of this country to consume that wool, and a very long time to get it here. He emphasized the fact that the coming of this wool should in no way interfere with the present steps looking toward the increased use of wool substitutes or to hold back future steps looking toward a continuous growth of the use of substitutes and the conservation of wool during the existence of the war.

Resolved, that for the purpose of meeting the earnest recommendation of the Committee on Supplies, and the Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense, that the wool supply for the United States Army and Navy requirements be immediately conserved by the use of wool substitutes in fabrics for civilian wear, we, wool manufacturers of the United States agree:

1. To place upon the market for the Fall season of 1918, and for subsequent seasons, so far as may seem necessary, as many lines as our respective equipments will permit, of fabrics containing a material percentage of other stocks than virgin wool.

2. To discourage the use of wool for purposes other than are essential for the comfort and health of the civilian population.

We request the Government to co-operate with the manufacturers to enlighten the American people as to the need of conserving the wool supply of this country for their own welfare, and for the comfort and health of the men of the army and navy.

We authorize the present Manufacturers' Committee on Wool Conservation, representing the entire wool manufacturing industry, to take all necessary action to put into effect the foregoing plan.

Long Coat and Fur Trim Liked.

The bustle effect in suits, being the most outstanding development of the Fall styles, is played up by the local shops, both in their displays and in their advertising. But the big sellers of the season are those suits with long coats, according to members of the trade. Fur trimming is continuing strong in popular favor, and is being used with great success on dresses as well as coats and suits. It is said further that the tendency which developed earlier in the season toward higher priced merchandise is continuing with no signs of letting up. "Apparently there are no poor people any more except me," said one manufacturer.

Using Heavy Satin for Hats.

A new tendency in Fall millinery, according to the bulletin of the Retail Millinery Association of America, is the use of heavy satin for street and semi-dress hats. These hats are all satin, satin combined with velvet, or satin combined with fur. Black, brown, and taupe are the principal colors. Other things that are "good" here at present are hatters' plush hats in large and small shapes and ready-to-wear hats of panne velvet. In the trimmings, the best sellers are circular fur bands, fur bands combined with flowers, metallized flowers, steel and antique laces, ostrich fancies and bands, and various burnt effects.

Big Silk Demand Predicted.

Predictions are freely made by many in the local silk trade these days that the coming Winter and Spring will see the biggest demand for silks the industry has ever experienced. The high prices of all-wool fabrics are expected to result in a wider and more general use of silk in women's clothing than has ever prevailed heretofore. "The impetus thus given to silk," said one authority in the trade, "will carry them I believe, well through the next couple of years, even should woolen goods come down. Their admirable adaptability for the purpose and their smart appearance make them highly attractive to women of taste, and I do not believe their more general use will be unwelcomed."

The War Is Helping Them.

According to comment heard in the local dry goods trade, the war is doing lots of good to retailers located in the Southern towns near which are cantonments and training camps. Not only is a larger demand reported from these places for the kind of merchandise that is particularly useful to soldiers, especially the officers, but there is a marked increase in the call for things that are generally considered necessities in civilian life. The latter demand is attributed to the number of "women folks" of the men in khaki who have taken up temporary residence in the places in question. In some cases the extra business got in this way has been large enough to make it worth while for the dealers to come to this market a second time this season.

Drug Sales Were Limited.

Drug and Chemical Markets will say today that transactions in these trades have been more or less restricted in the last week by advances in price and a lack of supplies. Morphine is higher, and the increase in the tax on distilled spirits caused an advance in alcohol. Owing to inflated prices on numerous commodities, buyers are not inclined to replenish stocks except to meet daily requirements. Freer offerings resulted in lower prices on mercury, phenolphthalein and insoluble saccharin.

⁂

Black Undergarments Popular.

Local manufacturers of underwear for women report a growing demand for black crêpe de chine and georgette chemises. Satin, also in black, for bloomers and underskirts is likewise widely sought. The tendency toward black in preference to pink, white, or flesh color, is one of the outstanding features of the season for which manufacturers do not seem to be able to offer an explanation. Simple effects are said to most popular, though some novelties and fancy merchandise are receiving fair attention. Pajamas, it is said, are gaining more acceptance by women generally, satin and crêpe de chine proving the most favored fabrics.

Cotton Relapse Hits Gray Goods.

The break in cotton yesterday put a definite check on buying in the local gray goods market, though prices were firm at the levels reached in the recent advance. Sateens and twills were among the most active sellers of the day, and they were sold at prices that were not far below comparative bases of other cloths. Sheetings were not over-active, while the movement of printcloths was hardly more than fair. Among the sales of the latter were 38½-inch 64-60s at 10⅝ cents for shipment in November, December, and January; 38½-inch 60-52s at 9½ cents for shipment through the remainder of this year, and 60-48s in the same width at 9 cents for similar delivery. Closing spot prices follow:

Wool Coming from Australia.

The Textile Alliance, Inc. is officially informed that 4,000 bales of wool have been shipped to this country from Australia, on account of the 45,000 bales promised by the British authorities to be sold at auction for civilian use. It is further stated that 40,912 bales are being loaded on fast steamers, and are expected to leave shortly.

Supply and Demand Will Do It.

"The high prices prevailing for all-wool fabrics," said a local manufacturer of coats and suits for women, "will do more toward compelling a more extensive use of manipulated fabrics so urgently sought by Washington than any 'suggestion' short of actual legislation can hope to accomplish. Thus, it seems to me that any drastic action forbidding altogether the use of all-wool fabrics, besides being undesirable in its effect, is totally unnecessary. The old, and well-known law of supply and demand is accomplishing the necessary conservation while they are still talking down in Washington about what to do."

A well-known local firm manufacturing dresses, which on Sunday last advertised to women who want to become "knights of the grip," yesterday reported a very satisfactory response. The replies came from women who are now employed in retail cloak and suit departments, from women who have been in business for themselves, and from others who have never worked at all. The firm in question already has one woman "salesman" on the road, and as her work has been satisfactory, it was decided to carry the idea further. It is now planned to send out six when trips for the new wholesale season are in order. Quite a few of the eighteen men who are now traveling for the firm are of the draft age, and as they are called their places will be filled by women. Those who are not drafted, however, will be retained.

Furs for Auction Are on Show.

Prominent dealers from various parts of Canada and the United States, including Alaska, were in this city yesterday for a preliminary examination of the $2,000,000 worth of furs that will be put up at public auction in the Masonic Hall on Monday next and the four following days. The pelts to be sold were on view at the warehouse of the New York Fur Auction Sales Corporation, and the dealers were busy looking them over until nearly midnight. The assortment includes practically every kind of fur from common house cats to the richest Russian sables. In view of the present sold-up condition of the most popular skins, trade opinion was that the prices obtained at the sale would be high.

WOOL MARKET IS ACTIVE.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 10.—The American Wool and Cotton Reporter will say tomorrow:

"The wool market continued strong and active during the week with more or less of an advance. Fleeces have been a feature with quarter-blood and three-eighths-blood grades particularly in demand. Low scoured wools were sold in fair sized lines. Fine scoured wools sold also fairly freely, particularly snow white baled capes.

"The woolen goods market is firm and greater strength probably will develop. Precedence is being given to Government order.

"That the cotton goods market has advanced during the week is an inevitable development through the prices for raw material, and the prospects of still higher wage scales. There is a much less tendency to place orders for delivery during the coming Spring which shows extreme conservatism on the part of the buyers. With the increase in prices, however, the buying has not broadened greatly."

BRISK BIDDING AT FUR SALE.

Special to The New York Times.

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 10.—The third day of the Funston fur auction saw some sensational advances in prices. The attendance again was large and there were many new arrivals. The bidding was brisk and competition keen. The total realized at the sale thus far has almost reached the $2,000,000 mark.

Patagonian kitt fox skins advanced 10 per cent. over the price realized last April. A 10 per cent. advance on gray foxes also was noted. Marmots went up 20 per cent. and lynx skins advanced 40 per cent.

Moles advanced 25 per cent. over the April prices, and black bear, brown bear, and grizzly bear skins went up 20 per cent. Polar bear skins brought 40 per cent. more than they did in April, and the largest gains were in wolf skins, which sold at a price 60 per cent. over those last April.

TO HELP CONSERVE WOOL.

At a meeting held yesterday in the Waldorf-Astoria attended by 300 men representing the woolen industry of the United States, resolutions were unanimously adopted ratifying the program for wool conservation suggested by the Committee on Supplies and the Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense.

The meeting was addressed by Charles Eiseman of the Committee on Supplies, and by L. W. Shaw, Chairman of the Commercial Economy Board, both of whom are said to have asserted the need of conserving the country's wool supply in order to assure the fulfilling of Government requirements to clothe the army and navy. Reporters were not admitted to the meeting, but typewritten statements of the action taken were subsequenly furnished them.

Herbert E. Peabody, President of the American Woolen and Worsted Manufacturers' Association, presided, and in introducing Mr. Shaw of the Commercial Economy Board, pointed out that he was necessarily in close touch with national affairs concerning the war. "He has been given a duty to perform,' explained Mr. Peabody, "and those of us who have been thrown into contact with him can unreservedly testify to his sincerity of purpose and persistency toward such ends as his information and war experience lead him to believe are necessary." Mr. Peabody further pointed out that Mr. Shaw did not come as a dictator, and that he expected the woolen industry would demonstrate its patriotism beyond doubt by a complete response to the country's needs.

Mr. Shaw said that he conceived it to be his mission in addressing the woolen and worsted manufacturers to bring to them an atmosphere of war, to impress upon them that the country is at war, and that the seriousness of that fact could not be exaggerated. He indicated that in meeting the requirements of the Government and the needs of civilians, it would be necessary for woolen and worsted manufacturers to seriously alter their usual methods, and to do that most difficult thing, depart from long standing habits. He was most emphatic in indicating that the conservation of raw material was the first and cardinal duty, and everything that could possibly be done toward that end, should be done.

Mr. Eisenman said that arrangements had very recently been concluded whereby Great Britain has agreed to release to the United States for military purposes, approximately seventy million pounds of Australian wool. He urged that the significance of this be not exaggerated, that it would take a very short time for the machinery of this country to consume that wool, and a very long time to get it here. He emphasized the fact that the coming of this wool should in no way interfere with the present steps looking toward the increased use of wool substitutes or to hold back future steps looking toward a continuous growth of the use of substitutes and the conservation of wool during the existence of the war.

Resolved, that for the purpose of meeting the earnest recommendation of the Committee on Supplies, and the Commercial Economy Board of the Council of National Defense, that the wool supply for the United States Army and Navy requirements be immediately conserved by the use of wool substitutes in fabrics for civilian wear, we, wool manufacturers of the United States agree:

1. To place upon the market for the Fall season of 1918, and for subsequent seasons, so far as may seem necessary, as many lines as our respective equipments will permit, of fabrics containing a material percentage of other stocks than virgin wool.

2. To discourage the use of wool for purposes other than are essential for the comfort and health of the civilian population.

We request the Government to co-operate with the manufacturers to enlighten the American people as to the need of conserving the wool supply of this country for their own welfare, and for the comfort and health of the men of the army and navy.

We authorize the present Manufacturers' Committee on Wool Conservation, representing the entire wool manufacturing industry, to take all necessary action to put into effect the foregoing plan.

Long Coat and Fur Trim Liked.

The bustle effect in suits, being the most outstanding development of the Fall styles, is played up by the local shops, both in their displays and in their advertising. But the big sellers of the season are those suits with long coats, according to members of the trade. Fur trimming is continuing strong in popular favor, and is being used with great success on dresses as well as coats and suits. It is said further that the tendency which developed earlier in the season toward higher priced merchandise is continuing with no signs of letting up. "Apparently there are no poor people any more except me," said one manufacturer.

Realty Notes.

A meeting of the West Side Taxpayers' Association has been called for this evening at 267 West Thirty-fourth Street.

An encouraging feature in the building trade is that the September total of value is a shade larger than that of August, and when all returns are in, according to Bradstreet's, it is probable that the grand total for the month may show a gain. Every month since March had shown a progressive decrease.

The Union League Club has renewed the lease of its home on the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street for twenty-one years from May 1, 1917, and will pay George Freifeld and others, Trustees of the property $60,000 a year rental, with an option of renewing the lease for another twenty-one years. COMMITTEE OF NINE FOR COLUMBIA PEACE

STUDENT BODY TO MEET

Will Ask That Professor Beard Be Asked to Withdraw His Resignation.

A "memorandum" covering twenty-four typewritten pages and offering suggestions for meeting the problems at Columbia University that led to the expulsion of Professors Cattrell and Dana and the resignation of Professor Charles A. Beard was said yesterday to have been agreed upon tentatively by the Committee of Nine of the University Council. The Committee of Nine was appointed months ago from the membership of the University Council to consider means for bringing about closer co-operation between the trustees and the Faculties.

Members of the committee who have since been studying conditions at the university and the complaint that the trustees were limiting freedom of expression discussed the situation informally at luncheon yesterday at the Faculty Club and decided, it was said, to submit the "memorandum" to President Nicholas Murray Butler today and to the University Council on next Tuesday.

The "memorandum," it was learned, not only makes a survey of the origin of the controversy between Professors an dTrustees, but also contains many "exhibits" such as Professor Cattell's circular letter on the war sent to members of the faculties and letters written by Professor Seligman protesting against this action.

Caution also marked a meeting in Professor Seligman's office attended by many members of the Political Science Faculty, to which Professor Beard formerly belonged. It was explained later by Professor Seligman that the gathering was "not a meeting of the Faculty of Political Science, but merely a conference of Professor Beard's friends to consider his resignation."

It was reported that the purpose was to draw resolutions asking Professor Beard to withdraw his resignation, but Professor Seligman said after the meeting that "nothing had been done." When the second letter sent to the newspapers by Professor Cattell was shown to him he remarked: "Let him mouth all he wants to. I have nothing further to say."

Whatever the purpose of the meeting at Professor Seligman's office, not all who attended were in sympathy with Professor Beard's views, one of those present being Professor Ellery C. Stowell, who on last Tuesday sent a letter to THE NEW YORK TIMES taking issue with Professor Beard's view that "Freedom of Discussion" was the issue at stake.

It was formally announced by representatives of the students yesterday that a resolution would be submitted to a mass meeting of students in the gymnasium at noon tomorrow, requesting the withdrawal of Professor Beard's resignation. President Butler conveyed the impression in a brief statement yesterday that Professor Beard had eliminated himself from the situation, for when he was asked if any formal action by the Trustees would be necessary to accept Professor Beard's resignation, his reply was: "Professor Beard's resignation went into effect on Oct. 9. I have no statement to make."

When Professor Beard was asked what his reply would be to a request that he withdraw his resignation, he answered: "We will cross that bridge when we come to it."

There were rumors that Professor Beard was not entirely without prospects when he decided to quit the university, and that he has been invited by President Wilson to make addresses in favor of a vigorous prosecution of the war at meetings in the West and Middle West, but he refused to comment on the report. It was pointed out that such a commission would not be out of keeping with Professor Beard's views on the war.

On Tuesday night the American Union Against Militarism sent Professor Beard a congratulatory telegram, which seemed to some to be an effort to enroll him in the ranks of the pacifists. When asked to dispel his impression, he merely replied: "My letter of resignation explains my position on the war. Beyond that I have nothing to say."

Professor Beard said he had received many congratulatory telegrams and letters, some from persons of prominence, but refused to disclose the names of the senders. When asked to comment on the charges brought against Professor Seligman by Professor Cattell, Professor Beard said: "You can say at least that I have not indulged in personalities."

The decision of the students to hold a mass meeting at noon tomorrow in Professor Beard's behalf was reached soon after some radical youngsters "cut" their 11 o'clock classes to attend a demonstration on the library steps. This demonstration was promoted by some journalism students, who distributed handbills asking all students to cut their classes at 11 o'clock as a protest against the resignation of Professor Beard and the "autocratic" methods of the Trustees.

About 500 students, many merely curious, responded, but they were dispersed more or less roughly by a small but vigorous group of patriotic students led by Jack Hyde, Robert W. Scott, who is a naval reserve; "Dal" Cochran, Captain of the football team; Clifford Hollander, President of the senior class, and others. Leon Samson, an ex-student, tried to make a speech, but student patriots sounded three cheers for Columbia and the Faculty and gave the radicals what is known among students as the "bum's rush."

Professor Hayes, who has frequently expressed sympathy with Professor Beard, was conducting his class in history while this demonstration was going on. Suddenly rising up, he said:

"I am afraid I shall not be able to continue this class this afternoon. Professor Beard has been my friend, and I feel so keenly about what has happened that I will have to be excused. The class is dismissed for this afternoon."

The students waited until Professor Hayes had left the room and then elected C. P. Ivins, Vice President of the Senior Class, to arrange for the mass meeting. Mr. Ivins later announced this committee on arrangements: R. C. Latour, a senior; Walter Scott Robinson, a senior; Horace Friess, junior; H. W. Haldenstein, a sophomore; and F. P. Benedict, a sophomore, who was Treasurer of the Freshman Class last year.

The letter sent to the newspapers yesterday by Professor Cattell charged Professor Seligman with being friendly to the Trustees, while posing as the friend of academic freedom.

CAMP UPTON NEAR 70% OF CAPACITY

When tomorrow's quota of selective draft men report for duty at Camp Upton, the soldier city at Yaphank, L. I., will house 70 per cent. of the total number for which it was built. Yesterday 2,108 selected men from New York left for the camp, and today 2,136 more will leave. One hundred men failed to report at the last roll call before entraining yesterday. A number of the supposed delinquents reported voluntarily at the camp, having missed the trains they were ordered to take.

Of today's quota of 2,136, the 670 men from local boards one to eight, inclusive, and 165 to 170, inclusive, will entrain at the Pennsylvania Station at 11:00 o'clock this morning. The 542 men from local boards 154 to 164, inclusive, will leave at 10:30 A. M. from Long Island City by way of the East Thirty-fourth Street Ferry. In addition to this number, 201 men from local boards 174 to 177, inclusive, in Queens, will also take train at Long Island City.

The Carlton Avenue, Brooklyn, yards of the Long Island Railroad will be the scene today of the departure of 723 selective draft men from Boards 64 to 77, inclusive. This contingent leaves at 10 o'clock.

Henry E. Bricker, a divinity student, of 801 Blake Avenue, Brooklyn, who received his red card ordering him to leave for Yaphank today, will not go, because the District Board, of which Charles E. Hughes is Chairman, granted him exemption from military service. Bricker was passed by Local Board 80 and claimed exemption on the ground that he was a divinity student.

A. S. Lovett, who was passed as fit by Local Board 62, claimed exemption as a conscientious objector. The claim was refused, and he will have to go to Camp Upton. Lovett, in his affidavit, said he was a member of the "Fellowship of Reconciliation," of which the Rev. Norman Thomas is head. The District Board held that the "Fellowship of Reconciliation" does not come under the regulations which provide that a man must be a member of a well recognized sect before he can claim exemption on religious grounds.

Exemption was denied Dr. Adam Eberle, who is in charge of 730 patients in the Kingston Avenue Hospital for Contagious Diseases, in Brooklyn. He asked to be exempted on the ground that his place could not be filled by another man. An affidavit to this effect, sworn to by Dr. Haven Emerson, Commissioner of Health, was appended to the claim, but the district board was unable to exempt him.

Alligandrow Matinong and Villacaufa Clementine, who say they are natives of Manila, claimed exemption. According to the affidavits of the men, they shipped as seamen on the French steamship Royal Prince at Manilla, intending to visit New York and then return on the same vessel to their homes. The Royal Prince did not return to Manila after touching New York, but went on to England. The Filipinos refused to go to England and were discharged, they say, without pay. They registered with Local Board 24. The district board ruled that under the Provost Marshal's rulings Filipinos are not amenable to draft. They were not exempted yesterday, but their cases were sent back to the local board for verification as to their nativity and if it is found they are undoubtedly Filipinos they will be allowed to go.

CAMP UPTON, Yaphank, L. I., Oct. 10.—Twenty thousand recruits signed Government pay vouchers today for the month of September. Nearly $150,000 was turned over to the men, those who reported with the first increment receiving $20 apiece. With the Government outfitting and feeding the men, their $30 a month pay will be clear profit, with the exception of two or three dollars' incidental expenses, and many find that they are able to save for the first time in their lives.

REGISTER TODAY.

Only three days left for registration. Today and Friday the polls will be open from 5:30 P. M. until 10:30 P. M. On Saturday the polls will be open from 7 A. M. until 10:30 P. M. If you do not register you cannot vote.
